Leaders Believe They Could Get Ammunition in Foreign Countries

JUAREZ, Mexico, July 6.—Mexican rebel leaders today announced a new plan of campaign against the federal government. With Guaymas and other Pacific seaports as their objectives, the rebels will invade the state of Sonora, making their way south along the coast if possible toward Mexico City to join Emiliano Zapata, who dominates the southern revolution. Possessing a seaport such as Guaymas, the rebels declare they intend to get ammunition from foreign countries.

"We are going to try to get Guaymas first," said Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., father of the rebel chief, tonight. "From there we can get all the ammunition we need. We have made no arrangements with any foreign government for help as that would be unpractical, but we hope to buy ammunition in a commercial way from firms in Japan, Germany and other countries."

Expect to Get Arms From U. S.

Costello Herrera, commissary general of the revolution, also declared that with a hold on the west coast ammunition was certain to be forthcoming from foreign countries. He added that arms also were expected to be procured by boat from points on the west coast of the United States.

General Pascual Orozco, Sr., will not reach here until tomorrow or Monday, he declares to come at all. Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., stated tonight that he expected his son here tomorrow, unless plans were changed. Dispatches from Suaz, 100 miles south of here, report General Orozco, Sr., following the main part of his army there, preparing to send them on the expedition westward. Hundreds of head of cattle will be driven overland by the troops from the ranches near Suaz. Juarez today was formally declared the rebel capital, a proclamation to that effect being issued by Governor Felipe Gutiérrez and members of the legislature.

Intoxicated Rebels Cause Wreck

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, July 6.—Intoxicated rebel soldiers leaving Chihuahua over the Mexican Northwest railroad commandeered a young fireman and engineer, forcing them to jump the train at full speed toward Matamoros early today, but before it was 30 miles west of here it collided with a southbound passenger train near Sabinas.

Both engines were put out of commission. The engineer was killed and three of the soldiers seriously injured. The crew of the regular train were threatened by the rebels but escaped on a hand car to this city.

The federal main columns have not yet reached here, but 12 troop trains and two troops of cavalry were sighted early today near Santa Eufemia, a few miles south of here. Little harm was done by the rebels as they evacuated aside from the confiscation of some horses and occasional looting.

A squad of soldiers looking for horses saw some hitched to a funeral procession. They took the horses from the hearse and other conveyances, leaving the family of the dead man and mourners to bury the corpse as best they could.

GRIFFITH NAMES COMMITTEE

Will Organize Movement to Elect Roosevelt Presidential Electors
in This State

DENVER, July 6.—Attorney General Benjamin Griffith, as instructed at a conference of Progressive Republicans in Colorado Springs this week, today appointed a committee to organize a movement for the election of Roosevelt presidential electors, in the coming campaign. He named the following: Philip B. Stewart, Colorado Springs; Daniel Sullivan, Denver; George Carlson, Fort Collins; J. C. Ewing, Weld county; Robert Work, Morgan county; John W. Elwell, Pueblo, and C. J. Moyallan, Montrose.

In a letter sent out over the state, Philip B. Stewart, who announced himself as a candidate for governor at the month-long state banquet in favor of electing Roosevelt electors, this means that he will have to make his fight against the regular state Republican organization for the gubernatorial nomination.

ECCENTRIC CHARACTER DIES

CRIPPLE CREEK, July 6.—John Seville, aged 72, an eccentric character known here as "Little Fat Jack," died tonight at his county hospital. For several years Seville made his living by selling ice specimens given him by the miners of the district.

"Appeal to the people of the state of Colorado—not in a spirit of frenzy or hysteria, but calmly and dispassionately—to answer this question:

"If you represented the crew on a splendid ship—seaworthy and sound—and a small, reactionary minority of that crew should become mutineers to the principles governing the course and conduct of that ship—in other words, pirates—what would you, as one of a majority of that crew, feel warranted and justified in doing?

"Would you desert that splendid ship—turn it over to the pirates and build a new one, plank by plank—or would you rise like men, throw the pirates overboard, regain control of your splendid vessel and put good men at the helm to guide it safely to the port of honor for which it was destined?"—Extract from Phil Stewart's Appeal to Colorado Republicans.

MRS. DECKER IS REPORTED DYING

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denver, Colo., the noted suffrage leader, is dying in a hospital in this city. It was announced by the attending physician that she probably would not survive the night.

Mrs. Decker came to this city as a delegate to the general Federation of Women's Clubs, which ended its convention yesterday.

Last Monday evening Mrs. Decker was taken seriously ill and Dr. Cornelius De Bri of Chicago, who was also a delegate, was summoned to attend the stricken woman. It was found that Mrs. Decker was suffering from an intestinal obstruction complicated by a kidney complaint. A local physician was called for consultation and it was then decided to remove her to a sanatorium.

After being held for observation several days, it was decided that an operation was necessary and this was performed on Friday. After the operation it was believed that she might recover.

Later tonight she began slowly to sink and at midnight it was reported that the end was not far off.

Miss Harriet Platt of Denver, a daughter of Mrs. Decker, arrived today and is at her mother's bedside.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—The new officers and directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs held two meetings here today to discuss with the outgoing officials subjects pertaining to the work of the organization and to effect temporary organization, preliminary to the first regular meeting of the board which is to be held this fall at a date to be fixed later and at a place to be designated by the new president.

Mrs. Pennybacker of Texas, the new executive, presided at both meetings, and also at the session of the council which was held during the day. There will be no changes in the personnel of the various departments until after the fall meeting. Mrs. Pennybacker requested the officers and directors and the heads of departments to submit all suggestions in writing to her. The officers were the last of those who attended the convention to depart for their homes.

He has accepted the offer of a similar position with Syracuse university. Professor Coolidge received the degree of A. B. at Harvard in 1905, and of M. F. at Yale in 1909, coming direct from that school to Colorado college. He is a man of exceptional ability, and the offer from the large eastern school is regarded as a high compliment to his standing. His successor has not been named.

HEAT-CRAZED DOGS BITE 15 PEOPLE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July 6.—Temporary relief from the three days' hot wave came tonight when a lake breeze caused the mercury to drop from 90 to 75 in a few hours. Later the breeze died out and the thermometer began rising again. There were 10 deaths from the heat and 22 prostrations reported today. Heat-crazed dogs attacked and bit 15 persons. Three hundred thousand men, women and children left the city in the afternoon for nearby resorts to enjoy a week-end respite from the heat.

Dog Saves Woman's Life by Dragging Her From a Burning Bungalow

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Omaha, Neb., saved today the life of a mistress by dragging her unconscious body from a burning bungalow.

Mrs. Van Duzett, owner of the dog, was in her room when the fire came dashing in and began tugging at her dress. She followed and on reaching the lower hall, found the house in flames. She ran to her room, seized her own life and was over come by the heat and flames.

When the mistress did not respond, Omaha dashed into the house and dragged the unconscious woman to the yard where she was revived by neighbors who had been attracted by the flames. Both the woman and the dog were carried to a hospital.

AGED PRINTER IS STRUCK BY MANITOU STREET CAR

Philip Corcoran, aged 67 years, librarian of the Union Printers union, sustained a compound fracture of the right thigh when he was struck by a westbound Manitou street car at the corner of Sixth street and Colorado avenue, Colorado City, after a fall from a building. He was standing at the southeast corner of the car and an eastbound wagon were approaching. For some reason he suddenly started running, passing just back of the wagon and in front of the car. The bumper struck him, knocking him down. He was dragged about 20 feet before Motorium David P. McConaughy could stop the car.

He was taken to the Emergency hospital in Colorado City and cared for by Dr. J. F. Villard. Later he was taken to St. Francis hospital, where Dr. P. O. Hanford set the broken bones. He was reported as resting easy last night. His injuries are confined to the compound fracture and a lacerated head. Dr. Hanford said last night that his case is the only circumstance that may interfere with his recovery.

PUPILS IN RURAL SCHOOLS NEGLECTED

CHICAGO, July 6.—The nation's school houses are so unimproved that more than two-thirds of the 12,000,000 pupils in the rural public schools of the country fall to a level of high standard in their studies.

That condition was described as a menace to educational progress and as one of the reasons why the country child looks forward to the city in a report submitted before the national council of education today. The council met preliminarily to the opening here on Monday of the fifth annual convention of the National Education association.

The conditions surrounding the traditional "little red school house" were described as so deplorable that the council considered a plan to have the national association employ an expert to investigate and report on rural schools.

E. T. Thorndike, state superintendent of public instruction, Toledo, Kan., declared "the country child is neglected, ill-fed, and the country school house is neglected school house. They said the importance of rural education was shown in the fact that of the 20,000,000 school children in the United States, 12,000,000 attended country schools, yet less than one-third of the rural pupils were able to meet their grades."

"There must be a revival of interest in the country school if the education of the country is to progress," said Mr. Thorndike. "There must be a raising of the school house in the desert, in the mountain, or on the plain, to a level of rural life and not a haphazard effort to teach science, arithmetic and English to a child who has no food, no clothing, no shelter, and no health."

A. J. Matthews, president of the State Normal School, Teachers' union, said he believed Akron had solved the rural school problem in a way which allows any rural school with eight pupils or more to draw on the state for $1,000 annually. He said the state provided $1,000 for the school and $1,000 for the teacher's salary. He said the state provided $1,000 for the school and $1,000 for the teacher's salary.

MOST FAMOUS ITALIANS OF HUMBLE PARENTAGE

Well-Known Writer Illustrates This Theory in Collection of Biographical Sketches

ROME, July 6.—The theory of the well-known writer, that the majority of famous Italian figures, rising from humble parentage, and achieving great success, is illustrated in a collection of biographical sketches, which has just appeared.

It is noteworthy a fact that Italy's greatest men are of absolute obscure lineage. The father of Dante, a humble peasant, and the father of Michelangelo, a bricklayer. The father of the great painter, Raphael, was a bricklayer. The father of the great philosopher, Aristotle, was a peasant.

Hanford, the house Judiciary subcommittee when it adjourned today, Monday, apparently had not closed that branch of the subject and it is expected that a few more witnesses will be heard today.

The witnesses were summoned by Judge Hanford's attorneys and testified strongly in his favor. The exception was L. Frank Brown, an attorney, who testified that he had seen Judge Hanford twice, asleep on the bench and twice apparently intoxicated.

POINTS OUT ECONOMIC POSITION OF IRELAND

Only Solution of Problems of United Kingdom Is Maintenance of Free Trade With Great Britain

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, July 6.—The tariff commission has issued a valuable memorandum on the economic position of Ireland and its relation to tariff reform, in which some of the effects of the home rule bill are pointed out. The conclusion that is reached is that the only solution of the economic problems of both countries is to be found in the maintenance of free trade between Great Britain and Ireland.

The view of the economic position of the United Kingdom as a whole, which the committee must bring about, in view of the effect upon these interests both in Great Britain and Ireland of the free trade system, the only possible conclusion is that the solution of the economic problems of both countries is to be found in the maintenance of free trade between Great Britain and Ireland.

Chance to Give Encouragement. Under a reform of the British fiscal policy, which is responsible for so much of the distress of Irish agriculture and industry, it would be possible to give more encouragement to Irish industry, as well as to those of the rest of the United Kingdom.

Natural conditions in Ireland are favorable to the growth of agriculture and industry. The soil is fertile, and the climate is mild. The people are industrious and enterprising.

The father of the great painter, Raphael, was a bricklayer. The father of the great philosopher, Aristotle, was a peasant. The father of the great statesman, Cicero, was a peasant.

Leaves Fortune to Insane Comfort of Birds and Animals

PARIS, July 6.—When Miss Grandjean died three years ago at the age of 75, she left the bulk of her fortune, which amounted to $100,000, to the Paris poor house, but she had not a heart for her fellow creatures only. She was very fond of animals, and to her house near the Denon hospital, was attached a big aviary, in which she kept 150 birds of different kinds, as well as half a dozen rabbits and even a mouse.

The poor old lady could not bear the idea that any of these animals should suffer by her death, so to insure their being well cared for, she committed them to the charge of the man who had been looking after them, providing him with a liberal allowance to stimulate his zeal. This she directed that, besides the 150 birds, the man should receive every year $240 for the keep of the birds, $10 a month for that of each of the seven horses, and $2 a month for his attention to the comfort of a parrot, which was a great pet.

AUGUST 7 DAY SET FOR NOTIFICATION OF WILSON
THAT HE IS NOMINEE

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 6.—Gov. Woodrow Wilson and Senator-elect Ollie James of Kentucky, permanent chairman of the Baltimore convention, decided this afternoon to have the governor formally notified of his nomination on the lawn of New Jersey's White House here at 2 o'clock this afternoon of Wednesday, August 7. Mr. James came up from Washington and had a long talk with the governor, during which he was requested to name as late a date as possible for Governor Wilson to catch up with his correspondence, now some 10,000 letters and telegrams behind.

The speech of notification will be short and the governor's reply will sound the keynote of the campaign. Mr. James declared Governor Wilson let it be known today that he would deal with the high cost of living and the tariff, which he regards as the leading issues, clearly and fully. He will in these references to other points of the platform also. "Until that time, however, he will have little to say in reply to criticisms of the platform by Theodore Roosevelt or anybody else. His speech of acceptance, which he will shortly begin to draft, will be his first public comment, he declared, upon the party platform.

Refuses to Take Issue With Critics.
Every attempt to induce Governor Wilson to take issue with any critic so far has failed. He discussed today the high cost of living as an issue, saying he regarded it as the leading issue, with the tariff at the heart of it, but declined to comment upon Colonel Roosevelt's utterances.

Mr. James went to New York tonight. The notification committee will meet, he said, at the Imperial hotel in New York on the morning of August 7 and come in a body to Sea Girt.

With reference to the chairmanship of the national committee, Mr. James said:

"The manager must be a man who does not make mistakes. William F. McCombs is a great organizer and a man of unusual executive ability."

Mr. James told the governor he had talked with Champ Clark and knew Clark was strong for Wilson.

"There is no doubt as to Clark's loyalty to this ticket," Mr. James said, "nor as to the loyalty of any other devoted candidate for the nomination. No Democrats are sulking in their tents this year."

Clark Adherents Pledge Support.

At K. Young and W. B. Shearer of California, Clark delegates to Baltimore, were among callers who pledged support to the governor. John A. Wilson of Franklin, Pa., the nominee's first cousin, headed a delegation of Californians en route from Baltimore who had stopped over on their way home to assure him of their support.

Theodore A. Bell, who was leader of the California delegation, and floor manager of the Clark forces at Baltimore, also called and pledged his support.

"I am going back to California tonight," he said, "to help place behind Governor Wilson the same people who stayed so loyally by Clark. We stayed with Clark all his ship went down. Now we are just as strong for Wilson. We harbor no ill feeling."

"We hope Governor Wilson will come out and make at least 10 speeches in California. He has an excellent chance in my opinion, of getting the solid electoral vote of the Pacific coast states."

During a conversation tonight, Governor Wilson was told that Mr. James had said concerning Mr. McCombs:

"McCombs is undoubtedly everything Senator James said he was," replied the governor. "He managed the campaign splendidly. I was told by several of the experienced leaders at the convention that we had the most wonderful organization they had ever seen."

MONARCHISTS ABOUT TO BREAK OUT IN PORTUGAL

LISBON, July 6.—The Portuguese government has ordered the battleship Vasco de Gama to Oporto in consequence of disorders in the towns in the northern provinces.

MADRID, July 6.—Renewed reports have been received here of an impending attempt to restore monarchy in Portugal. From the northern provinces of that country, many families are fleeing across the border to Spain as they fear uprisings. The authorities today seized an automobile near Monforte bound for Vigo loaded with 100 rifles and 20,000 cartridges destined for the use of the monarchists.

DENVER MAN CHARGED WITH KIDNAPING HIS GRANDSON

DENVER, July 6.—Thomas W. Matthews of this city was arrested here today as a fugitive upon his arrival from Los Angeles with his 2-year-old grandson, Harold Matthews. Charges of kidnaping the child have been preferred against him in the California city by Mrs. Verna Matthews, his daughter-in-law.

Upon his arrest, Matthews said that he expected it. He said he found his son had left his wife in Los Angeles for a time and that the child was not receiving proper care.

He will fight extradition.

TWO POUCHES REGISTERED MAIL HAS DISAPPEARED

KANSAS CITY, July 6.—The disappearance of two pouches of registered mail from a government street car while en route to the union depot from the postoffice last night is puzzling government inspectors here. The mail was addressed to New York, Omaha and Ogden, Utah. The New York pouch contained 100 registered letters and stocks, bonds and other valuable papers. The other pouch contained a small amount of money, some jewelry and valuable papers.

Enter on Final Stage of Lorimer
Trial in Senate

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The final stage of the trial of William Lorimer on the charge of misconduct in procuring his election to the United States senate from Illinois, was entered upon today in the senate with general debate.

It had been agreed to vote upon the case during "The legislative day" of July 6, but a vote was not reached today, and the senate recessed its legislative day until Monday with a prospect that a vote would not be had until the latter part of next week.

Senator Dillingham of Vermont, chairman of the Lorimer investigation committee, and Senator McChesney of North Dakota, supported the Illinois senator's right to his seat, while Senator Myers of Montana made his maiden speech in the senate in opposition to Mr. Lorimer.

Mr. Dillingham will continue Monday. He devoted himself to an effort to demonstrate that Mr. Lorimer had not been a candidate for the senate until after the constitutional deadlock in the Illinois legislature had continued for more than four years and until it looked as if there must be an adjournment without a result. He gave an elaborate account of political conditions in Illinois and, after underlining to show that the Democrats would not support the reelection of Senator Hopkins, said that, on the other hand, they were willing to turn to Mr. Lorimer because of their personal regard for him.

Charges Ignorance of Subject.

Senator McChesney took the position that the senate was unfit to try such a case because of the popular prejudice against Mr. Lorimer and because of the influence that popular sentiment would have on votes. He declared there should be an amendment to the constitution relieving the senate of the necessity of passing upon cases involving charges against its members.

Mr. McChesney charged that the popular sentiment against the Illinois senator was due to ignorance on the subject. Some senators had, he said, been deflected from reelection because of their votes for Lorimer, but as for himself, his vote would not be influenced by popular clamor, regardless of the effect of his vote on his own senatorial fortunes. The case had been once tried, he said, and he believed the doctrine of res adjudicata entirely applicable.

Mr. Myers would not accept the doctrine of res adjudicata. He regarded this as simply a new trial, and contended that if the senate should not be permitted to grant such a trial, it would be the only tribunal controlled by the English system of jurisprudence to which that right would be denied.

"There is no such thing known to the law as turning back," there must be a verdict in this case," declared Mr. Myers.

The fact that 53 Democrats had voted in the Illinois legislature for Mr. Lorimer, a Republican, was sufficient reason for suspicion, as Mr. Myers saw the matter.

Expressing confidence in the irregularity of the Lorimer election, he declared the very atmosphere of the Illinois legislature was charged with corruption on the day of the Lorimer election.

"The case is reeking with infamy, is dripping with corruption, and is redolent of crime," he declared.

POOR INDIAN GIRL TO RECEIVE A FORTUNE

Wife of Evergreen, Colo. Blacksmith.
Who Saw Father But Once, Will Share His Estate

DENVER, July 6.—Sandra Snyder, an Indian girl, and wife of W. M. Snyder, the blacksmith at Evergreen, Colo., has fallen heir to the major portion of $320,000 in cash and valuable realty holdings in Kansas City through the death of her father, Nathaniel Simpson.

Mrs. Snyder was in ignorance of her inheritance or her father's identity until she received news of his death a few days ago.

Her mother, a member of the Black Hawk tribe of Indians in New Mexico, died soon after Simpson was born, 12 years ago, and gave the child into the keeping of Josie Anderson, a cowgirl, who took the wait in the vicinity of Evergreen and cared for the baby.

Only once did the father visit the child, when Simpson was 5 years old. The girl grew to womanhood and a year ago well. Upon Simpson's death in Kansas City government agents traced the heirs to the Indian lands which Simpson received from his Indian wife and found that Snyder should receive the major part. Simpson sold his holdings, which were in the Oklahoma oil belt, and put $320,000 in cash in banks. The remainder of his money he invested in realty.

Henry Simpson, a son by a second wife, will inherit a part of the estate probably. The exact division will not be settled for some time.

Snyder for awhile worked in Denver as a waitress and domestic to help her foster mother, who is now married.

ARIZONA ELECTRICIAN GOES BROKE IN CHICAGO; FINED

CHICAGO, July 6.—Well, Frisbee, an electrician from Phoenix, Ariz., who says he spent $700 in two days seeing Chicago, was arraigned in the municipal court today, charged with refusing to pay an automobile bill.

He said his money was gone when he returned from a trip to Fox Lake, Ill., and he was unable to pay the fare demanded by the chauffeur. He was fined $10 and costs.

MANY INJURED IN WRECK

GREENSBORO, N. C., July 6.—Engineer Thomas C. Beach of Alexandria, Va., received injuries from which he died tonight and more than 50 passengers were more or less seriously hurt when the Southern Railway limited train No. 35, Atlanta to Washington, ran into an open switch and collided head-on with a freight train. The wrecked train carried between 30 and 400 passengers and was running at full speed.

STEEL COACHES SAVE LIVES OF PASSENGERS

JACKSON, Miss., July 6.—Steel coaches probably saved the lives of more than a score of passengers when Illinois Central passenger train No. 1, southbound, was wrecked 150 miles south of Jackson late this afternoon.

A number of passengers were badly shaken up and bruised, but only three required more than slight medical attention.

These were brought to Jackson and placed in a hospital where it was said their injuries were not serious.

The wreck was due to a soft road-bed caused by heavy rains. The plunger coaches stripped the rails loose for 100 yards.

"Resolved, by the governing board of the Progressive Republican league of Minnesota, that we are unreservedly opposed to the organization of a third party at this time, and we believe that all Progressives in Minnesota are in a present candidate position, and that a party who will faithfully carry out progressive principles."

According to George S. Loftis, secretary of the league, Mr. Wilson's name was not inserted as all the members of the Republican committee had not been heard from. Mr. Loftis also declared the league would send out speakers in the interest of Mr. Wilson's candidacy.

BODY OF DEAD MAN FOUND IN VACANT ROOMING HOUSE

DENVER, July 6.—When Frank Whitless, a real estate broker, went to a rooming house of Arapahoe street
today to take possession of the place and its furniture, control of which he had contracted for Friday, he found the body of a man dead in one of the rooms on the third floor.

One room on the third floor discovered a human corpse. Through papers found in the room, the body was identified as that of Jesse Greenfield, a laborer.
He had been dead nearly 12 hours.
Under the door of the room, was a note from the landlady, Mrs. J. J. Greenfield, dated July 6, and signed "J. J. Greenfield," in which she stated that she had been told by a man who had come to her room that a man had been killed in the rooming house.

'STAND BY SHIP---FIGHT' THE MINORITY PIRATES'

P. B. Stewart Explains His Position As to Colorado Electors---Appeals to the People to Oust Machine Gang

Philip B. Stewart of this city, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, explains his position regarding the electoral vote of Colorado, in a signed statement printed below. "This statement is a severe arraignment of the methods employed to procure the renomination of Mr. Taft. The part played by A. M. Stevenson in the manipulation of the affairs of the national committee at Chicago is touched upon in the candid, vigorous style characteristic of the Colorado Springs man.
He concludes with an appeal to the Republicans of the state to enter the contest at once in every precinct and county, so that a majority of the counties of the state will send delegates to the state assembly, to meet in Denver July 31, favoring the dethronement of the kings of machine government in Colorado.

Mr. Stewart's Statement.

The statement in full follows:
To the Voters of the State of Colorado:
I have hesitated to make plain my position on present political conditions until the sentiment throughout the state could be developed and reasonably ascertained. Now, however, after all the people should represent the determining influence. I do so now in fairness to my political associates and personal friends, who I find, overwhelmingly party lines in considerable numbers.

I cannot accept Mr. Taft's nomination as the true Republican candidacy.

He was manipulated into his false position in an arrogant defiance of Republicans throughout this country.
What occurred in Colorado also occurred in every state of the Union during the preliminary skirmishes for delegates. Every obstacle possible was imposed by Mr. Taft's friends between Republicans and delegates of their choice.

Colorado typifies the whole wretched story. Here instead of a delegation standing for the people a delegation was mainly selected at a dinner in the University club of Denver on which was more than one man who stands for the doctrine: "The public be damned,"
and who stand, unfortunately, for no higher purpose in the realm of politics.

What 12 States Did.

2. Twelve states, despite every obstacle raised by Mr. Taft's friends, secured presidential primaries. I append the results:

In these 12 states, in which presidential primaries are established by law and where it was found impossible to stifle the expression of the people, as it was accomplished by committee action in Colorado, the total vote against Mr.
Taft was 1,513,639 and the vote cast for Mr. Taft was 758,117. The Republicans voted against him 2 to 1, as shown by the following table:

States	Vote	Roosevelt	Taft	Follette
California	1,335,568	69,345	45,676
Illinois	291,017	127,481	42,692
Maryland	23,124	26,009	5,000
Massachusetts	82,039	88,732	2,058
Nebraska	46,796	13,351	15,736
New Jersey	51,225	14,054	2,464
North Dakota	23,569	1,876	24,123
Ohio	165,809	118,562	16,570
Oregon	28,905	20,517	22,491
Pennsylvania	278,962	163,063
South Dakota	85,537	9,843	17,821
Wisconsin	628	47,514	133,354
Total anti-Taft vote	1,513,639
Total Taft vote	758,117

Mr. Roosevelt was not a candidate in Wisconsin.

These Republicans in these states made the Republican nomination. In hardly a single spot on this wide continent did Mr. Taft in any sort of a primary—from straw ballot to legal primary—receive a majority of the ballots.

The national committee, elected four years ago, the most active and influential of which were represented in the primary voting of this year, on which committee A. M. Stevenson of this state, was so necessary that day after day a proxy was secured for him, piled up the Taft delegates in the most flagrant, vicious and revolutionary method ever recorded in the history of contests before that committee. Let me use two illustrations.

Gives Two Examples.

The two California delegates from the Fourth district and the delegation from the state of Washington. The California primary law did not recognize the congressional district system, units. The rules of the national committee required this. Roosevelt carried the state by 77,000. Mr. Taft entered the primaries with a full knowledge of its provisions. His name appears today as favorably entered with the secretary of the state of California. There was confusion in this district resulting from confused precinct boundaries.
No one knows what the vote was. The secretary ignored the vote, overwhelming choice of the state under a state statute which Mr. Taft accepted.
In the state of Washington I quote
the Spokesman's Review of Spokane,
the great Republican journal of eastern Washington, and up to this time,

"The act of the national committee in depriving Mr.
Roosevelt of this delegation to which he is entitled, and which the Republicans of Washington wished him to have is infamous." Are Mr. Taft's supporters made in this view the Executive, Congress, and both papers abandoned Mr. Taft.

Forty-six per cent of Mr. Taft's strength of 581, as shown on the nominating ballot, came from the south and central possessions.
Twenty-seven per cent was made up with states like Colorado and Washington, where every one who knows enough to come in out of the rain, knows Taft could not win a primary vote and 27 per cent, including New York, from states with a fair Republican prospect, but which have in times past cast their electoral votes for Democratic candidates for the presidency.

Say, therefore, that Mr. Taft was
"but over" by sinister influences: that the committee and the convention betrayed their trust and the people, and that a conspiracy of growing duration, culminating in revolution by the committee, absolves me from obligation to support Mr. Taft—more, that it compels me as a Republican and a lover of my country to protest against such a candidacy.

I appeal to the people of the state of Colorado—not in a spirit of frenzy
or hysteria—but calmly and dispassionately—to answer this question:

Pirates On Board Ship.

If you represented the crew on a splendid ship—seaworthy and sound—
and a small, but reactionary, and active minority of the crew were to come multitudes to the principles governing the course and conduct of that ship—in other words, pirates—what would you, as one of a majority of that crew, feel warranted and justified in doing?

Would you desert that splendid ship—
turn it over to the pirates and build a new one—plank by plank—or would you rise like men, throw the pirates overboard, regain control of your splendid vessel and put good men at the helm
to guide it safely to the port of honor, for which it was destined?

What, under the circumstances, am
I and the multitudes who possess
the same belief, to do?
Roosevelt has accepted a nomination tendered him by the honestly elected majority of the Republican convention.

As candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, and believing that I am emphasizing my Republicanism and my patriotism by my position above outlined, I will go to the primaries in this state if I secure the necessary votes in the party assembly.

If some way is found by which the people can say whether they prefer Taft to Roosevelt electors I will abide by the result. If this is not done I must be considered free by some other means, to assist in offering publicans who desire to do so a chance to vote on Roosevelt electors.

Confidence in the People.

The great mass of Republican voters in Colorado are not the hired men of the few who represent the interests, and I have absolute and implicit confidence in the people when I appeal to them to exercise their energy and their suffrage in the direction of a transformation of conditions.

Finally, I appeal to the Progressive Republicans in every section of the state—those who believe in the words of the great Lincoln when he said, on the hallow field of Gettysburg, on the day this statement bears date, that we must consecrate ourselves to the idea that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth, that they take diligent effort to send to every county assembly, and to the state assembly, which meets in Denver Wednesday, July 31, men who will enlist in the cause of progressive and honest government." The understanding that their period of enlistment endures until such time as fair, honest republican government has been restored to the people and to the party.

Modern Journalism, Its Ideals, and Trend Is Subject of Discussion

MADISON, Wis., July 6.—The call for the conference here, July 29 to August 1, to "Discuss modern journalism, its ideals, its trend and its condition," asserts that three important factors are influencing modern journalism.
The capital required to maintain a newspaper is constantly increasing,
says the call, with the result that newspapers are frequently owned or controlled by men with money rather than with ideas, the returns from advertising are rapidly increasing, resulting in a greater dependence on the advertising for maintenance and a growing endeavor by the advertiser to influence the policies of the papers and the newspaper is coming to be an investment and not infrequently is run merely to serve the business, social or political interests of its owners.
The call was issued by the extension division of the University of Wisconsin
today. Among those who have significantly their purpose to attend the conference are Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press; W. J.
Ryan, William Allen White, Norman

Hapgood, Editor of Collier's Weekly, Charles H. Gray of the Baltimore Sun and Fremont Older of the San Fran- cisco Bulletin. It is planned to have the leading newspaper men speak at each of the six sessions of the confer- ence.

TEXAS WOMAN KILLS HUSBAND

DALLAS, Tex., July 6.—W. A. Ladaque, clerk at a Dallas hotel, was killed by his wife here. Witnesses say Ladaque was talking over a telephone when his wife came up behind him, she called him and as he turned around fired five shots. She was arrested and refused to talk. She formerly was Miss Mildred Shallick of Texas, and was known as sister of a jockey by that name. She had separated from her first husband.

TWO MORE OF WRECK VICTIMS IDENTIFIED

CORNING, N. Y., July 6.—Two more of the 14 persons killed in the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western wreck near here were identified today. They are John Kennedy, Harrison, N. J.; John Sampson, 332 Central avenue, Jersey City, N. J.; both leaves their bodies to be identified.

F. THEOBALD, RESIDENT HERE 42 YEARS, DIES

Fred Theobald of 620 South Tejon street, aged 69 years, died at his home at 2 o'clock yesterday morning after a long illness. He was one of the pioneers of this region, coming here in 1871 from New York. He built the old Pikes Peak flour mills in 1874, and operated it until 1894, when it burned. He was for years leader of the old Firemen's band of this city, and also was sexton of the cemetery for several years.

G. O. P. County Central Body Meets Tomorrow

The Republican county central committee will hold a meeting at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the court house to arrange for the holding of a primary election in El Paso county to select delegates to the county assembly, which will elect the delegates to the state assembly in Denver, July 31.

THREE GAZETTE TAGS ARE RETURNED; TWO STILL OUT

It is three days since The Gazette sent up its quartet of prize-bearing Fourth of July balloons, and up to last night three of the prizes were returned. The tag calling for $5 in gold was brought to the office by William McDaniel, 331 East Williamette avenue. Young McDaniel saw the balloon sailing past, the evening before the Fourth, noted its direction and estimated how far it would travel. He was up bright and early the next morning, following the general direction taken by the balloon. He had quite a trip for his search took him just south of the Nordranch ranch, northeast of Colorado Springs. But the hunt was worth the trouble, for the tag McDaniel picked up was good for $5 in gold.

John Brenneke of 450 East St. Vrain street also found a tag good for $2.00 in gold. This one was picked up east of Palmer park, about four miles from Colorado Springs. The other tag was found and returned to the Gazette office by Wiley Thompson, who lives on Palmer boulevard east of Colorado Springs. The balloon came down not a great distance from Thompson's home, and the tag was exchanged for a big American flag.

Two other tags are still out and good for a five-pound box of chocolates and the other for 10 packages of firecrackers. Now that the Fourth is over, the boy or girl finding the tag calling for the firecrackers may call for something equivalent in value.

POLITICS WARMING UP IN THE COUNTY

Many Candidates Mentioned; Considerable Local Timber for State Offices

With P. A. Stewart an announced candidate for the Republican nomination for governor and M. W. Purcell a possible candidate on the Democratic ticket, others in El Paso county who seek political offices, or whose friends are urging them to enter the political ring, are lining up for the campaign. Stewart announced himself several weeks ago, and recently Purcell said in an interview that many of his friends were urging his name to head the state Democratic ticket. He also is mentioned for district attorney. To date, however, he has not said definitely that he will be a candidate. Finance John Campbell of the state supreme court is a candidate for reelection, and State Auditor M. A. Leddy of Manitou is after the nomination for state treasurer.

It is hinted on the street that a number of possible candidates may not seek election at all, and it will be a week or more before the field of political runners adjusts itself so that the names of all are known. Cripple Creek has it that Judge James Owen of the district court will not be a candidate for reelection, although he has made no statement here one way or the other. From indications, County Treasurer McMahon and County Assessor Perkins will meet with little or no opposition for reelection, but for the other offices at the court house there promises to be a large and varied assortment of entries. There seems to be no opposition now in the matter of Justice Justice Gouldy seems to be in the field alone in his court, and it is rumored that Justice Dunnington may be endorsed by the Democrats for reelection, although he seeks the Republican nomination.

Some of Those Mentioned.
The following are included in the list of candidates who either have announced themselves or for whom their friends have spoken:

District Judges—Judge J. W. Shearson, Judge W. S. Morris, Judge James Owen. Republican present judges, County Judge John B. Little, C. H. Dudley, Republican, District Attorney J. E. Ferguson, City Attorney C. L. McKesson, C. M. Hawkins, C. L. Stewart and H. C. Cassidy, Democrats. District attorney—Dunbar F. Carpenter, Representative R. S. Ellison, County Attorney Willis L. Strachan, P. R. Goodman of Burlington, E. J. Boughton, Cripple Creek, Republican, Assistant District Attorney M. W. Purcell, Democrat.

County Judge—W. J. Kinney, J. P. Jackson, Colorado City, J. E. Sanford, W. N. Ruby, Republicans; Assistant District Attorney M. M. Burns, Democrat.

County assessor—Assessor F. A. Perkins, Republican; Treasurer F. M. McMahon, Republican; County Clerk—M. E. Stubbs, F. F. Wolff, Republicans; Clerk B. C. Shelton, Democrat.

Sheriff—Sheriff George Birdsell, Police Chief S. D. Burns, former Police Chief W. S. Reynolds, Constable Harvey Gillingham, James Stewart, Probation Officer Harry Alward, W. H. Banger and Jack Mortimer, Republicans; Evidence Officer C. B. Horn, Andy Adams, James T. Russell, Democrats.

County superintendent of schools—Miss Laura A. Leach and Miss Minnie McCall, Republicans; MISS T. E. Stark and possibly Mrs. Emma Lewis, present superintendent, Democrats.

County commissioners—Commissioners Harry Hutchinson and J. P. Madden, W. B. Kline, former mayor of Manitou, W. A. McIntyre, W. E. Kennedy, Thomas Thomas, Hamah, Republican; George Bernard, Van E. House, Democrats.

Justices of the Peace—Justice C. H. Dunnington, Justice W. H. Gowdy, Republicans. Constables—Constable Edgar Barton, Jim Dehlin, Republicans.

DUDLEY MCCLURG WEDS

Dudley Berilston McClurg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert McClurg of this city, and Miss Charlotte Lockwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judd Lockwood of New York city, were married there last Saturday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. H. Taylor. Young McClurg formerly lived in this city, and attended senior high school in the Garfield school and later to Cutter academy, entering with the class of 1910. He went there only two years, leaving at the end of his sophomore year to go to a military school in Haverhill, Mass. Later he attended New York college. The announcement of his marriage came as a surprise to his friends here.

TO HAVE EXPERTS—El Paso, Kit Carson and Lincoln counties are each to have an expert agriculturist detailed by the department of agriculture to instruct eastern Colorado farmers in scientific dry farming. Half of the expense will be paid by the government and half by the counties. FALSE MERGER REPORTS ISSUED IN NEW YORK

Mining men of Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek are criticizing the untrue information being sent out in circular letters by Charles A. Stoneham & Co. of 34 Broad street, New York, concerning an alleged merger of many big mining companies in the Cripple Creek district. Men who are acquainted with the facts laugh at the "news" being dealt out. The circular letter is as follows:

EL PASO CONSOLIDATED—The business of consolidating important properties in the Cripple Creek district under the control of the El Paso Consolidated has started with the acquisition by that company of the property of the Mary McKinnon and Henry McKinnon companies. El Paso has already produced nearly $2,000,000 in gold, and $7,000,000. Both have been long-time dividend payers. These properties are practically contiguous in the Beacon Hill section of Cripple Creek, and the consolidation, which is a forerunner of a bigger merger, will be effected in the Cripple Creek district, should add immensely to El Paso's market valuation. El Paso is now earning net annually at a rate better than $600,000. These earnings will be increased in the next two months to a basis of $800,000 annually, and within the year the original El Paso should be yielding net available for dividends $1,000,000 annually. The foreign banking interests which have recently bought into this company are very optimistic and announce their intention, after careful inspection of the Cripple Creek district, to carry through the plan for a general consolidation of all the mining companies controlling about 50 per cent of the annual production of the United States.

SCIENTISTS INTERESTED IN FLORISSANT FOSSILS

The Florissant fossil beds are to be searched with the scrutinizing eyes of expert scientists this summer, and a score of workmen will be engaged to dig out about a carload of specimens to be shipped to Washington and London, according to a statement made by Prof. T. D. A. Cockerell, professor of zoology at Colorado university, the section with Prof. J. B. Ford, of the American Museum of Natural History at Washington, and Prof. Edward Parfitt, of the British Museum, Paris. Professor Cockerell left yesterday for Florissant to begin the new investigations.

Professor Cockerell already has made trips to the fossil beds, and declared that the list of fossils found includes the imprint and petrifications of 11 species of vertebrates, 40 insects, 20 spiders, 45 fish, 145 kinds of plant life, and other forms of extinct life. It is the opinion of the scientists that the Florissant region was frequently the scene of eruptions, similar to the Mt. Pelee eruption on the island of Martinique. The investigations to be made this summer will probably bring a harvest of valuable information and specimens to the world of science.

THE North End Land Company has sold a great number of lots upon which fine residences have been built, and in order to promptly dispose of the balance, the remaining unsold lots on North Tejon street, Cascade avenue and west side of Nevada avenue are offered for sale on the monthly installment plan as follows:

For lots north of the Rock Island Railway, payments will be $5 down and $5 per month.

For lots south of the Rock Island Railway, payments will be $10 down and $10 per month.

No interest will be charged for one year from date of purchase, and only 6 per cent thereafter.

Purchasers who pay all cash will be allowed a discount of 10 per cent.

All lots are located on or within one block of Tejon street car line, where service is unequalled.

Surroundings are attractive--improvements permanent.

Prices for single lots from $180 up.

If purchasers are not ready to build, prices have been reduced and are low enough to justify the investment.

Compare locality, surroundings, improvements, terms and prices with other lot offerings, and the advantage of locating in the North End, where values are established, will be apparent.

A temporary office will be placed on the property, at the north end of the Tejon street car line, where agents will be prepared to show the lots, which are staked and numbered.

Never in the history of Colorado Springs has the class of lots described herein been offered at such reasonable prices, and upon such favorable terms.

IS YOUR BABY "TEETHING?"

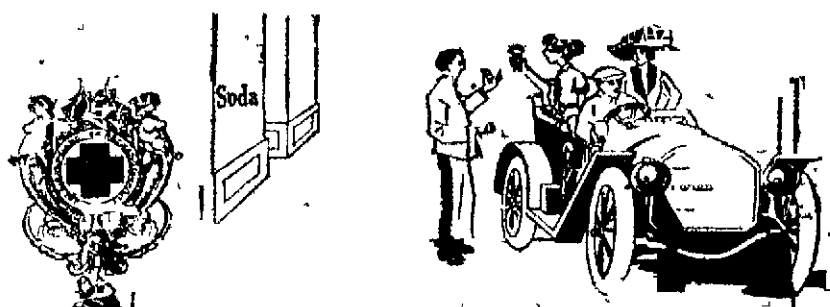

No fallacy is more strongly entrenched among parents than the idea that the process of dentition is a painful and usually is associated with constitutional disorders varying in severity from an eliminative rash to general cholera infantum. Coming down the years unchallenged and undiminished popularity, this false claim has become a source of respect for the axiom, "teething produces nothing but teeth." In healthy infants the only signs of teething are a slight rise of temperature, with occasional loss of sleep and general irritability. Occasionally a delicate baby, with an instable nervous equilibrium, or one showing signs of rickets, may suffer a disturbance through teething, but this is not a general rule. When, therefore, you are tempted to attribute to the teething process an intestinal disturbance, or when some one else tells you that your baby is suffering from a

REGULAR "PATIENTS" AT DENVER HOSPITAL MUST GO
DENVER, July 6.—Dr. Rose Kidd here has reported to Mayor Arnold that there are 100 people at the county hospital, out of a total of 350, who do not need medical attention. Many of them have relatives well able to care for them and some have been at the hospital six years.
It is charged by Dr. Kidd that these people have been kept at the hospital because of political influence with the former administration. They will be required to move to make room for those who really need attention. Dr. Kidd will furnish the mayor with the names of these "patients," as well as the names of their relatives.

The same is true in a lesser degree as to the county poor farm. Out of 150 there, about 50 are said to have relatives able to take care of them.
For several years the officials at the hospital and poor farm have complained that room was lacking at the institutions to accommodate all who need to go there.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS DEATH DENVER GIRL

Friend Declares Body Found in Lake and Buried as Miss Candace Wheeler or Is Really Some One Else

DENVER, July 6.—Miss Candace Wheeler, who was reported drowned in Bowles lake a week ago Sunday, alive? Whose is the body that was found floating in the lake last Tuesday and identified as that of Miss Wheeler?
Friends of the missing girl about the theory that she was drowned and are emphatic in the belief that she is still alive. They will demand that the body be examined for more positive identifications, unless the insurance companies holding policies in her name, who have intimated a similar course, take immediate steps toward that end.
In the will left by Miss Wheeler, executed less than two months before the drowning, her estate, valued at about $10,000, was left to her fiancé, Otto Meyer, of Minneapolis. Two insurance policies, amounting to $12,500, were left to his brother, Dr. J. H. W. Meyer, of this city. He was also made sole executor of the estate. The policies contained an incontestable clause, which had her death occurred a month before the time it presumably did, and had been paid.
Mrs. Emma George, a member of the party who motored to the lake with Miss Wheeler, scoffs at the suggestion that she was drowned. She asks that the body of the woman who was buried Wednesday, beside that of Miss Wheeler's mother, be exhumed that she may be given a chance to identify it. The only identification made was by Dr. Meyer and his brother, and they declare that the body was so badly decomposed that it was barely recognizable.

Mrs. George, who is a widow, is known to be wearing on the day of the disappearance, were missing from the body found last Tuesday.
Joseph Cooper Wheeler, the father, who resides at Jamison, La. is expected here next week to inquire into the mystery surrounding his daughter's death, according to Canton O'Brien, his attorney. He has been in constant communication with O'Brien since the tragedy, and declares he will come to Denver to conduct the investigation in person and to contest the will.
Miss Lewis is of the opinion that some mystery is back of the apparent tragedy. She does not believe for a moment that Miss Wheeler was drowned.

She also asks that the body be exhumed and expressed confidence in her ability to identify it.
"Miss Wheeler had very pretty teeth," she said, "rows over and smooth, and once you had ever seen them, you would have no difficulty in identifying them."
She said that Miss Wheeler had very few friends, and was a sort of mystery herself.

DISAPPOINTED DEMOCRAT HANGS BRYAN IN EFFIGY

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Conflicting stories are being told of the hanging in effigy of William Jennings Bryan at Colonial Beach, a summer resort near here, Wednesday night. The truth seems to be that the hanging was done by one man, disappointed over the outcome of the Baltimore convention. The residents of Colonial Beach, however, resented the act and by way of showing it out, took the effigy and hung it in the river.

DENVER SLAYER IS TO HANG WEEK OF SEPT. 8

DENVER, July 6.—Oscar Cook, condemned to death for the murder of A. Loyd and Police Officer McPherson in a Valverde saloon, must hang in the week ending September 8.
He was brought before the bar in the West Side court today, and the date of his death was set in the week ending September 8, and ending September 14.

Woman Whose Life Was Filled With Tragedies Succumbs to Injuries

HAWESVILLE, Ky., July 6.—Hawesville county's "trouble woman," Mrs. Nancy Newman, is dead here at the age of 87 years. She was the last of 12 brothers and sisters whose father, Captain John Streett, was the first sheriff of the county. Tragedies came fast into Mrs. Newman's life. Her youngest child was scalded to death in a bathing tub; the second was burned to death on the stove; the third, a young girl, was murdered in a riot at Louisville, Mo. The fourth was killed two years ago when a horse fell on him. The fifth met death in a railway five years ago.
A son-in-law and a grandson met violent deaths and the aged woman herself two weeks ago, following into the kitchen for a drink, fell and broke her leg, which had not begun to mend when she died.

Matchmaking Agents Take Chances of Any Recompense for Work

PATIS, July 6.—French courts and judges are sometimes paradoxical. Marriages are diminishing in number, yet the courts do not encourage matrimonial agents. Matchmaking is all very well and commendable, but to make a business out of matchmaking does not meet with their approval. If the agent obtains payment in advance he is safe. If after marriage the bridegroom declines to pay a fee that he had explicitly or vaguely promised, it is quite another matter. Here a matrimonial agent has no right, or has no right to appeal to the law for obtaining payment of a matrimonial commission. This is a question which has frequently been mooted in French law courts. In some places the transaction is considered as lawful and binding, and in others it is condemned as being against public policy.
A court at Lyons recently decided that a contract by which a matrimonial agent was to be entitled to collect a certain percentage of the dowry of the bride was valid, and payment was ordered. Immediately afterwards, a Paris court decided exactly the contrary, holding that such a contract was immoral, and therefore could not be enforced by law. A third decision has now been given which hits the happy medium. A contract stipulated for commission and expenses. The court allowed the expenses, if there had been any, but decided that the claim for a stipulated commission was illegal. People may recover expenses for matchmaking but can claim no commission.

PICTURE MAY GET SPAIN INTO TROUBLE

BERLIN, July 6.—A curious controversy has arisen between the Spanish government and the authorities at the Kaiser Friedrich museum at Berlin, with regard to a picture which was purchased by the museum two years ago for 1,000,000 gold pesetas ($200,000). According to the statement of the museum authorities this picture, which is known as the "Adoration of the Magi" by the famous Dutch painter Van der Meulen, was bought by their agent at a public auction in Madrid, which had been sanctioned by the Spanish authorities. There was nothing of a hole-and-corner nature in the purchase, which was effected against the strong competition from British and American dealers.

The picture at the time was the property of an order of Spanish monks, and it hung on the monastery of Alcala de Henares, and the monks were anxious to sell it in order to devote some re-

Forget the nameplate—and still the car stands pre eminent

If it bore no nameplate—the Studebaker Flanders "20" would be bound to make an immediate and an impressive appeal to your preference.

Study it from any of the ordinarily accepted specification standards—motor-measurement, power, wheel-base, axle-strength, ease, style and rivalry, in its class, recedes into the remote background.

But you are not asked to draw a check for $800 on the evidence of your own eyes, or your own experience, or your own sense of value.

Seventy-five thousand of your fellow citizens vouch for Studebaker value.

And we would like you to feel the impact of that tremendous pressure of public opinion.

We would like you to summon up a mental picture of that mighty host of Studebaker cars rendering yeoman service in every nook and corner of the nation.

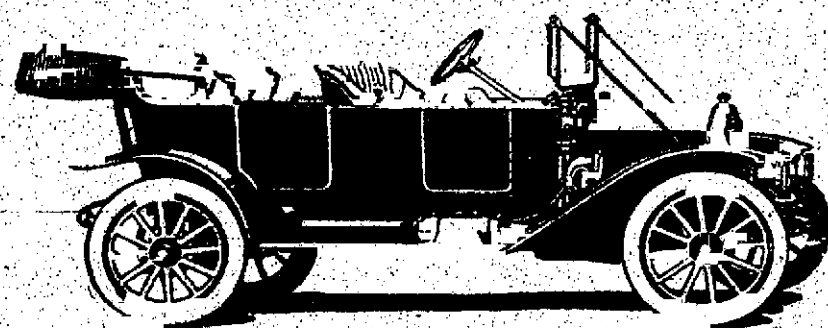

We would like you to remember that the satisfaction of these 75,000 citizens has its source in the name Studebaker.

We would like you to realize that each and every one of these 75,000 cars does its full duty, day by day, precisely because it is a Studebaker car.

The Studebaker "20" which you buy and drive is the embodiment and the expression of the sixty year old Studebaker policy of serving its public.

We want you to remind yourself that the Studebaker word has been good as gold to the buying world for more than a century—and that it is being made good in every car that issues from the mighty Studebaker plants.

The globe-girdling sales system of the Studebaker Corporation—the 1,800 Studebaker stores in America—the superb laboratory and manufacturing equipment in the Studebaker plant—and the low cost of production and distribution which they involve—in these factors you find the reason why the Studebaker "20" lays immediate hold upon your preference—why it appeals to you as the very uttermost of value at or about $800.

The stomach is not so fastidious as to reject the food of itself of the poisons in the blood, just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to reject itself of clinkers. The waste does to us exactly what the clinkers do to the stove, make the fires burn low until enough clinkers have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest nor is food digesting. In this condition all else develops. Doctor Presley's Golden Medical Discoveries, eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyncic alternative, cures the most intractable blood poisons, makes the liver, stomach and bowels root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong a constitution, the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

THE HEIR TO THE HOORAH" THIS WEEK

'The Heir to the Moorah' was seen here three seasons ago with the original New York cast at a two-dollar scale of prices. This week will be its first presentation west of Chicago in New York. It is a production that cannot be produced except by first-class organizations.

The story of "The Hen to the Hoor" is interesting throughout the entire four acts and there is not a moment from the rise to the fall of the curtain when the interest of the spectators flags. The characters are all taken from life and are a correct portrayal of the people who go to make up the inhabitants of the stage from where the action of the play takes place. The scenes and incidents are laid in a small western town west of the circle.

This production gives the Hawley company a fine opportunity to show its strength in drama. Each role is an important one and consequently this week's production will allow each individual equal chance for making a personal hit.

Times Hawley, will be seen in a new line of work this week being cast for the role of Joe Lacy, owner of a Houth mine. The part calls for a little comedy but is a most important supporting role. Friends in the district who wish he handles the role—Miss Jane Shultz as Miss Joe Lacy is a character which gives her ample opportunity in strong dramatic work. Also supporting cast includes Kate Stone, Gretchen Knorr, Aunt Gilbert, James Gray, Lillian Snow, Mrs. J. Perry, J. Castleman, Lou Seads, Buster Russell, Barnes J. Davidson and L. L. Bowles.

The author has provided a story with plenty of comedy and romance which for truthfulness easily ranks with any western drama ever written.

THE OUTCAST

—101-BISON-101—
AT THE MAJESTIC

Monday's feature at the Majestic theater is one of those thrilling two-reel, 1,000 feet 101 Bron-101 features. You all know them, they are the best feature photoplays made anywhere on earth and it is useless to comment upon them further except to say they are absolutely the best.

In addition to this feature there will be two additional reels making 1000 feet of feature films—an hour and a half's show for the sum of ten cents for adults and five cents for children. Georg Hockenhart's concert orchestra consisting of six pieces is the best in the city and will render sweet strains while you are being entertained with the photoplay.

On Tuesday July 9 we will repeat a special request of the many who are invited to see them the five-reel feature, Ned C. Goudwin as 'Lagim' in 'Oliver Twist' without question the greatest feature ever filmed. Do not fail to see this as it is the last time it will be shown in Colorado Springs. On Wednesday also 'Lagim' on the Cicket.

Councilman C E Bruce of Montrose is optimistic over the town's future. He feels that the yearly increase in visitors to the hotels and the growing number of people who are building summer homes there have established it as one of the leading permanent summer resorts of the United States. (That the citizens of Montrose are due to the situation. Permanent landmarks are taking the place of temporary structures, the city is putting a new sidewalk regarding the streets and improving the lighting, and many private owners are putting in ornamental lighting. The town has an excellent public library—Colorado Springs Gazette.)

THE HEIR TO THE HOORAH THIS WEEK

Paul Armstrong's great western comedy drama, "The Heir to the Hoorah," will be this week's offering at the Opera house with James Hawley and Garrick players.

"The Heir to the Hoorah" was seen here three seasons ago with the original New York cast at a two-dollar scale of prices. This week will be its first presentation west of Chicago in stock. It is a production that cannot be produced except by first-class organizations.

The story of "The Heir to the Hoorah" is interesting throughout the entire four acts, and there is not a moment from the rise to the fall of the curtain when the interest of the spectator flags. The characters are all taken from life and are a correct portrayal of the people who go to make up the inhabitants of the stage from where the action of the play takes place. The scenes and incidents are laid in a small western town west of the divide.

This production gives the Hawley company a fine opportunity to show its strength in drama. Each role is an important one and consequently this week's production will allow each individual equal chance for making a personal hit.

James Hawley will be seen in a new line of work this week being cast for the role of Joe Lacy, owner of "Hoorah" mine. The part calls for very little comedy but he will more than surprise his many friends in the artistic way which he handles the role.

Miss Irene Shirley as Mrs. Joe Lacy is a character which gives her ample opportunity in strong dramatic work. The supporting cast includes Kate Stein, Gretchen Knorr, Nina Gilbert, James Guy, Walter J. C. Shawway, J. J. Berry, J. M. Cardeman, Lou Sears, R. B. Ruster, Russell Barnes, J. Davidson and S. T. Bowers.

The author has provided a story with plenty of comedy and romance which for truthfulness easily ranks with any western drama ever written.

THE OUTCAST

-101-BISON-101-

AT THE MAJESTIC

Monday's feature at the Majestic theatre is one of those thrilling two-reel 2,000 foot 101-Bison-101 features. You all know them, they are the best feature photoplays made anywhere on earth, and it is useless to comment upon them further, except to say they are absolutely the best.

In addition to this feature there will be two additional reels making 4,000 feet of feature films—an hour and a half show for the sum of ten cents for adults and five cents for children. George H. Henschelberger's concert orchestra consisting of six pieces is the best in the city and will render sweet strains while you are being entertained with the photoplays.

On Tuesday, July 9, we will repeat as special request of the many who called to see them, the five-reel feature, Nat C. Goodwin as "Engin" in "Oliver Twist" without question the greatest feature ever filmed. Do not fail to see this as it is the last time it will be shown in Colorado Springs. On the same day also, "Ranchman, the Orphan."

And now for Miss Annie Russell, daughter of John and well known to every nation and people.

A couple of high minded, wealth laden theatre owners have taken Miss Annie Russell in hand, or perhaps she has taken them in hand, and are even at the moment working with the owner of the new Theatre, which is being erected on West Thirty-ninth street, for its first season. They are to install Miss Russell, together with a full and complete line of Elizabethan costumes, and here she will entertain New York and residents of the old English classics.

Miss Russell is a maid of some talent and a great deal of that quality called personal magnetism, and her presentation of the English classic has been a various times highly commended. But it seems to us that this move is ill advised. We make this statement solely from a monetary standpoint and entirely aside from the aesthetic. Also we remember the "early English" efforts of the New Theatre Company which put such a hole in the pockets of multimillionaire patrons that these actors after "that art" were not only ready, but willing to leave their playhouse to a real live manager who catered to the popular whim rather than aesthetic fancy.

The name of the new organization will be "The Annie Russell Old English Comedy Company."

CRITICISES HIGH SCHOOL

THE AGO, July 6. High school education throughout the United States was branded as generally "bookish, scholastic, abstract and impractical" in a report submitted today to the national council of education of the National Education association.

"The whole trouble with high school education," declared David Keim, president of the State Normal school at Normal, Ill., in pointing the report, "is that it is regarded too much as merely preparation for the university. Instead of dealing with the problems of life today, the students are taught to deal with the language, politics and customs of 15 centuries ago. About all the high school teachers are college graduates who have no other knowledge of affairs outside of college life. Their teachings are therefore bookish, scholastic and abstract."

We need a change of plan in high school teaching in the direction of the farm, shop and home. While we do not recommend an education entirely vocational, we urge a departure from the college ideal."

As a means of "modernizing" high schools, the report recommended that in a four-year course, two years of vocational study should be provided.

J. Stanley Brown, John, Ill., high school superintendent, a member of the association, presented from some of the

In the center is Miss Kate Condon, who is playing Kathia in the recent revival of "Gilbert and Sullivan's" "Mikado," which is now on the road. On the right is Ma Belle, who is playing at Keith's Union Square theatre.

We place head in the front rank, admittedly, for it has been whispered along the bluff that the caloric waves that radiate in shimmering ranks from an almost motionless asphalt street, dumb, blind and deaf the summer theatrical season. Of course this may be but a rumor, and worthy of no credence. In fact, others have claimed that that said season is neither dead nor lost, but is summing up, in some sequestered nook with a breeze of breeze carefully trained on its swollen, low brow and water at its elbow.

There is one thing certain, however, and that is that up to date of present

Are You Blue and Worried?

Nervous? Some of the time really ill? Catch cold easily and frequently suffer from biliousness or headache? The reason is that your system does not rid itself of the poisons in the blood; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of cinders. The waste does to us exactly what the cinders do to the stove; make the fires burn low until enough cinders have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest, nor is food appetizing. In this condition illness develops. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyceric alternative extract made from bloodroot, golden seal and mandrake root, stone and queen's root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

Mrs. BENJ. BLAKE, of Fort Worth, Ont., Box 36, writes: "I have been a great sufferer for years from throat trouble, catarrh, indigestion, female troubles, bloating, constipation and nervousness—at times I would be in bed, then able to be up again. Was under many different doctors' care, and would get better for a little while, then I would be down with chronic inflammation all through me. For nineteen years I had this present in my blood. After trying nearly everything I got worse. I read in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I have taken the Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets, and have used five bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I am now able to do my work and walk with pleasure. I feel like a new woman. I enjoy everything around me and thank God for letting me live long enough to find something that made me well again."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1912.

P. B. STEWART'S ADDRESS

MR. P. B. STEWART'S address on
"The Four Tests of Citizenship," delivered at the Temple Theater July Fourth, was an exceedingly strong one. Such a subject would have been treated by the usual speaker in a trite and commonplace manner; it would have offered an excuse for serving up numerous platitudes with pompous condensation. It is needless to say that Mr. Stewart's treatment of the subject was the opposite of this. He illuminated his theme and brought out new points in a thought-provoking manner.

The speaker made some quotations
from the New York Herald of May 18, 1860, and the Boston Post of May 24, 1860, commenting upon the then recent nomination of Abraham Lincoln for President of the United States. The Herald called the Republican nominee "a third-rate lawyer, poorer than even poor Pierce," a "fourth-rate lecturer, who cannot speak good grammar," and a "peripatetic politician." That paper spoke of Lincoln's "hackneyed, illiterate compositions" which were "unimpaired trash, interlarded with coarse and clumsy jokes." The Post stated that "Lincoln has merely a talent for demagogic appeal," and he was a "fanatical tool" who could only be elected by "trickery and demagoguery."

It is illuminating to read these quotations in the light of history. They show how faulty and ill-conceived and prejudiced an estimate of a great contemporary may be. They show that perspective given by the lapse of time is necessary for the proper judgment of a great personality. Great men of all ages have been surrounded by villi-fers, not dastardly, merely small-minded and prejudiced.

CO-EDUCATION IN THE UNITED STATES

WITH this year's commencement coeducation disappeared at Wesleyan University, which is situated in Middletown, Connecticut. The four women of the graduating class made a triumphant exit. All took high scholarship honors, those honors being evidenced by election to the scholarship fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa. For years the women of Wesleyan have been appropriating scholarship honors unto themselves, and for an equal length of time the men of that institution have made it as disagreeable as possible, in a social way, for their fair but intellectually inclined classmates.
So it was that in 1909 the trustees of Wesleyan voted to exclude women altogether
after 1913.

Another eastern institution, Tufts College, situated in Medford, a suburb of Boston, has abandoned co-education. In 1910
the trustees of that college received legislative authority to establish and maintain for the education of women exclusively a college to be known as The Jackson College for Women. Pending the establishment of Jackson College, for which a special endowment had been received, arrangements have been made within the existing college for a separate department for young women to be conducted upon the segregation plan. Previous to the decision to abandon co-education at Tufts an investigating committee reported that there is a fundamental difficulty "in the way of success of co-education in Tufts College, and that this difficulty lies in and pervades the whole student body, growing stronger rather than diminishing."

POPULAR IN THE WEST

The only other instances where co-education has been wholly or partly abandoned are: Western Reserve University, co-educational from 1873, opened a separate women's college in 1888; Colby College of Maine, co-educational from 1871, has taught women in separate classes in required work since 1890; the University of Chicago, co-educational since 1892, has recently opened a separate instruction for men and women in the first and second college years. Called segregation, in the year 1912.

The attitude toward co-education in the colleges is decidedly different in the West from that in the East. In the western half of the United States it is almost the only system of education. On the other hand, in the New England and northern middle states the great majority of college students are receiving their education in separate institutions.

Since co-education began with the founding of Oberlin College in 1833 the opposing tendencies in regard to it in the colleges of the East and West have been distinct and strongly marked. Regardless of this difference of tendency some authorities now contend that co-education throughout the United States is to be superseded by segregation of the sexes in separate classes,
by the special provision for the education of women in allied colleges, as at Tufts, and by entirely separate institutions. In the case of Colorado College, for instance, such authorities would point to the better dormitory provision for women than for men as the entering wedge of segregation. Perhaps they would likewise point to the fact that during the past four years 22 women have been elected to Phi Beta Kappa as compared to seven men; although 60 per cent of the registration are men, as a reason for discontent by the men with things
as they are.

Whatever may be the feeling against coeducation in the eastern colleges there is no important evidence that the West will abandon it. Co-education always has been and bids fair to remain the prevailing system in our section of the country.

SOME LADY, ABSOLUTELY.

From the Waterloo Reporter.
A slight accident occurred yesterday afternoon
in front of Albert's garage, when a motorcycle, ridden
by an unknown rider, ran into a woman, whose name is likewise unknown, resulting in a smashup of the machine, but the lady escaped unhurt.

PIGGS IS PIGGS.
Every one is invited to the motion picture show and concert to be given in front of the Arcade department store on the evening of July 4, conducted by Col. G. W. Pigg. Music will be furnished by Prof. Charles Pigg, who has promised to be with us, assisted by his sisters, Lottie and Nellie Pigg.

TICULAR PEOPLE.
From the Kenosha News.
My park is especially started for those who love
a beautiful place and don't want to mingle with or practice vice, such as gambling, in other parks in worse forms, such as gambling. The park is now the finest in Wisconsin. People who know say it is as fine as some of the parks in the old country.
All who see it love it.

TIME FOR PUBLIC INTERFERENCE.

From the New York Tribune.
The terrible catastrophe to the Vaniman dirigible airship, which immediately following the tragic death of this quimby and her companion, emphasized the danger of air navigation. Even the safest type of dirigible, for that is what the dirigible is thought to be, is far from safe. Count Zeppelin's own experiences with this type have been a long series of accidents, though without loss of life. In the present state of air navigation would not the public be justified in attempting such a degree of regulation as would put an end to the misuse of dirigibles for public exhibitions and thereby keep them out of the hands of the reckless and the reckless. After their crash in June, and seven have already been killed in July. Deaths are becoming almost a daily occurrence.

This shocking slaughter is not necessary to the development of aviation. It tends to make the public hold human life more and more cheap, and heaven knows, it is already held cheap enough.
As the use of dirigibles increases, and the number of persons eager to operate them grows larger, and as exhibitions become more numerous, fatal catastrophes will multiply unless the state interfere to prevent reckless performances under improper conditions.

Something may be done by intelligent restriction for some aeroplanes and dirigibles are able to make runs for the safety of complete participation in exhibitions in their interest. Especially dangerous performances could be forbidden, as well as ascensions when weather conditions are unfavorable.
Otherwise could be suggested by experienced aviators who have caused to give exhibitions and understand fully the dangers of flying under the promp-tling of show managers eager to give the crowds a thrill and gaining at big dollar receipts. Proper regulation would not hamper the future of aviation,
but would aid it.

PANNIER SKIRT DISCARDED.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.
It is much to be feared that in the current political excitement matters of much greater importance have been ignored or forgotten. Thus the fact that the pannier skirt, which made its first appearance at the Grand Prix last month and which caused such a veritable sensation in the feminine world, was absolutely discarded at the Asbury race on Sunday seems to have made no impression upon male minds. Even if women noticed it, we should say that on the distant side of humanity this was of vastly more importance than the personage
of the nominee at Chicago or Baltimore.

The news is calculated to bring great satisfaction to all concerned. The ladies have never been removed of the pannier skirt, but they have found it difficult to adapt it to the powers that be in Paris instead of in London. It seems that the powers struggled with the question and gave a decided negative.
Doctors would be satisfied except the dressmakers,
who would have been glad to furnish new wardrobes for the pannier style of architecture had they been asked to do so.

Women may now go to the seashore and mountains content with current wardrobes. The tube skirt prevails. If we may be allowed to express an opinion on such a weighty subject, we may say that the tube skirt on a conservative platform is all right. We object to the radical element of female society which is now going around in a skirt about the dimensions of a trouser leg, but even this is less of a scandal than the pannier, which was a much wider skirt than the tube. The tube skirt is a progressive skirt, and it is the prevailing skirt
that is to cover everything in the way of skirt fashions. It is the only skirt that is not a disgrace to the name of skirt.

FOR PRESIDENT: THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

From the Chicago Tribune.
The convention vote by which President Taft defeated the Republican nomination is 571 out of a total of 1,078. Of these 571 223 come from territories and states that have not cast an electoral vote for a Republican president since reconstruction days.
They represent only the democratizing of federal service in the Democratic south, with the effect of disfranchising the Republicans voters in the north.
Seventy-six come from New York, selected accidentally, which, in the words of the anti-Roosevelt
"World," would make Tammany hall blush.

Michigan delegates at-large were chosen by violence. Clements, from Indiana, according to the evidence, by the votes of "repeaters." And so it runs. Only 18 Taft delegates from Massachusetts can trace their credentials back to the people. And direct primaries were everywhere fought by the Taft engineers.

Roosevelt delegates elected by the people, to the number of 22, in Arizona, California and Washington were unseated by the national committee. In the state of Washington the Taft delegates represented ballgame and the coal-lump grabbers, just as in Colorado the representatives Guggenheim and in Montana Amalgamated Copper.

The Taft leaders did not pretend to have any legitimate claim to the delegates from Texas.
The Republican states and the Republican voters chose Roosevelt, but Southern Officeholders and Predatory Wealth have used violence and fraud in an attempt to give the name "Republican" to their choice for the presidency.

Furthermore, they have adopted the same bad
rules to govern the convention four years hence, thus proposing to disfranchise the Republican voters
again.

No free man can acquiesce in this debauchery
of his party and remain free.

If such action should be condoned, the presidency
would become self-perpetuating, as in Mexico.

The only question to be considered is the most available means to regain the popular selection of the president.

The Tribune does not believe that nine-tenths of the Republicans should allow themselves to be driven from the party of their fathers by the one-tenth composed of job holders, land grabbers and land robbers.

Certainly such a momentous step should only be taken by the active leaders after they have demonstrated its necessity to the rank and file.

Let this course of action be adopted:
Ascertain what electors now nominated propose to follow the choice of the people in their states and what ones will lobby the stolen convention.

Request the officials who make up the ballots to put Roosevelt's name at the head of the Republican ticket. Wherever possible contest the theft of the name "Republican" through the courts.

Wherever possible use the existing Republican machinery.

In states that misplace Taft's name in the Republican column, form the third organization to elect Roosevelt president, cooperating with the Republican nominees for other offices if possible, but if these nominees condone the theft of the presidential nomination, or attempt to profit thereby,
nominate candidates against them.

Republicans need not be dominated by officeholders or driven from their party by land grabbers.

THE CLAMOROUS CONVENTION GALLERIES.

From the Washington Evening Star.
Reports describing the convention proceedings at Baltimore tell of hours of "demonstrations" in favor of various candidates for possible candidates for the presidential nomination. This is an old story, as old as the holding of nominating conventions. It is the result of admitting to the proceedings thousands of spectators and partisans who have no business whatever at the meetings, and whose function is solely that of interruption and delay.
These noisy manifestations of favor for particular candidates are thoroughly discouraged. They are purely mechanical at the start, and while, perhaps,
for a short time they may sway men from their allegiance, the net result is solely one of exhaustion and time consumption. At Baltimore for every well-timed speech by a Taft supporter there was a screech from a Wilson man or an Underwoodite. For every banner waved by a Harmonian there was a considered cheer by a squad of Missouri men. Whatever was done by one faction was offset by another.
It is reported that the Wilson demonstration in the course of the nominating speeches exceeded that for Clark by several minutes, and yet when the first vote was taken the Clark strength was 116,7 while that manifested by the New Jersey governor.....

It is votes that tell in a nominating convention, not voices. A few score of dollars judiciously spent will insure the presence in a convention hall of enough loud voices to dominate the attention of the majority of the delegates. For every kind of mechanical devices, rattles, gongs, and even as at Baltimore, electric automobile screech-
ers. But the men on the floor, charged with certain instructions or determined of their own authority to cast their ballots for particular candidates, are not influenced by these obviously artificial clangers. It is not always the best vote getter in a presidential campaign whose managers pack the galleries of a convention hall with shouters of longest endurance. Furthermore, in almost every instance the nomination results from combinations
made by leaders in the privacy of committee rooms and hotel chambers, far from the clamor of the demonstrators and the music of the bands.

Our nominating conventions are regarded as interesting spectacles, but it must be confessed, that they are not gratifying to the American sense of dignity. They impress foreigners viewing them for the first time unfavorably and with good reason. It surely is not an impressive evidence of the capacity of a people for self-government to witness them as assembled in the presence of formally chosen representatives and engaging in shrieks and yells and loud noises and all forms of noise-producing inventions while engaged in the process of selecting the men for whom their votes are to be cast for the highest offices. Perhaps the chief political parties will some day recognize the folly of this mode of choosing candidates and hold the meetings of the nominating delegates in small spaces, with the clamorous galleries eliminated and everything conducted on a business basis with regard for the dignity of the occasion.

SCRIPTURE

GENESIS xix: 8-16.

And God said unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying:

And I, I build, I establish my covenant with you,
and with your seed after you:

And with every living creature that is with you,
of the fowl of the air, and of every beast of the earth with you: from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth:

And I will establish my covenant with you, and with every beast of the earth, and with every fowl of the air; and with every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth:

And I will send a flood, and will destroy the earth,
and you shall remain.

And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you, and every living creature, and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh:

And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the covenant between me and you, and every living creature, of all flesh that is upon the earth.

Immense Salaries Paid Stage Stars

Caruso, for instance, Gets $4,000 for a Single Performance. David Warfield, Who Got $75 a Week
Decade Ago, Has Refused Forty Times as Much—Some Other Instances

Robert Grau in the Editorial Review.

With the advance of years, conditions have changed in the theatrical, as well as in other professional and commercial fields. About a decade ago David Warfield was doing a "single turn" at Keith's Union Square theater
at a weekly honorarium of $75; Louis Mann was accorded about the same time $100; Victor Moore a few years ago, supported by a widely known actress, appeared in a sketch entitled
"Change Your Act" for $125 weekly.

Now—Stage stars about five years ago experienced much difficulty in getting an opening for a "last" played out of which their present great starting reputation arose. Not one of these players would today be refused ten times the amount they then received. Warfield, indeed, has repeatedly refused to touch
as much. These are only illustrations of the vast increase which has come in the last decade to hundreds of others.

When Lillian Russell Got $25 a Week.

Lillian Russell had a salary of $3,000
a week in vaudeville when she entered that field. But it is not so long ago that she was playing small parts and chorus bits for Tony Pastor at less than $25 a week. Vesta Victoria, who obtains easily $2,000 a week, if not more, came here many times for $150 a week when she was quite as good as she is now. Vesta Tilly, who commands about the same as Vesta Victoria, was only a few years ago dated at the prospect of obtaining from Tony Pastor $350 a week. May and Flo Irwin, a quarter of a century ago, were the best sister team in the variety field; their weekly salary running from $150 to $200 a week, yet when May Irwin a year ago returned to the modern vaudeville stage in a slight specialty, $2,500 was the figure willingly paid.

Marie Dressler, a few years since,
was identified with cheap opera, and a salary which did not require three figures to express it. At present four figures would denote the lowest amount in her pay envelope on salary
day. Lew Dockstader, while in vaudeville, never had more than $350 a week, now he is offered repeatedly, and is refusing, $2,000 a week. George Evans earned in the '90s $125 a week, and earned about the same he has been today for the asking. The four Co-hans, including George, his sister, Josephine, and his father and mother, were for years available at a salary of $200, though their last appearance together in vaudeville took place at the Masonic temple roof garden in Chicago at the remarkable sum of $3,000 for one week.

Salaries of Opera Stars.

In opera, the contrast is not quite so great, yet Ernestine Schumann-Heink, when she came here first to the Metropolitan opera house under Maurice Grau received about $250 a week; for some years past she has had no difficulty in earning $5,000 a week. Emma Caruso gets perhaps less today than a decade ago, when she was granted
$1,500 a night. Emma Eames earns $1,000 a night, about double what was accorded her at her American grand opera debut.

When Jean and Edmond de Reszke came they received $1,750 and $500 respectively, a night, and Jean commanded the remarkable sum of $2,100 a night, before he retired. Melba receives $2,000 a night, about twice as much as at her first season at the Metropolitan. Lillian Nordica is heard nowadays more in concert than in opera, but she never receives less than $1,000 a night. Tetrazzini only a few years ago was singing in a hall not far removed from a beer garden at San Francisco at a salary of $300 a night.
In 1910 Mr. Hammerstein paid her five times that sum. Today Tetrazzini gets $3,000 a night.

Caruso at $4,000 a Night.

Caruso came here originally on a contract inherited from the Maurice Grau regime, which gave his services to the Metropolitan at $1,000 a night,
but his honorarium has climbed yearly until he is the highest paid singer in the world, and is considered even at this as the cheapest artist to see in the field of opera.
This is in the same sense as Colonel Mapleson's point of view, when he often remarked that Adelina Patti even at $4,000 a night was much cheaper than any of her rivals at $500.

The writer can hear our present day
vaudevillians crying out that the managers receive much more today from the public. This is true, but nevertheless, the vast majority of what such artists really represent is refreshing.
It will also be argued that two performances daily would never have been tolerated by the stars of long ago, but in America Sarah Bernhardt appeared in from seven to 12 performances a week for Henry E. Abbey, interpreting a repertoire which would tax the strength of a Hercules. And this she received on her first visit less than Lillian Russell did for singing three songs in a vaudeville theater. John McCullough, not so many years before he died, was granted $35 a week at the Theater Royal in Montreal under Ben De Bar's management. Edwin Booth never had more than $500 a night, when under salary and he was the greatest box office attraction of all time.

The purpose of this article is not to deprecate prevailing salaries, but merely to convince in some degree a knowledge of the progress which has obtained in this age of theatrical achievement, and that after all, the player has been well rewarded.

A PAGAN FASHION

From the Ave Maria.
The fashion of keeping little dogs as objects of luxury is not at all modern. Both Greek and Roman women used to have small pets, over which they made as much fuss as does a fashionable lady of today over her poodle.

Even men, usually fond of dogs, were accustomed to dally about the Roman emperor's small dogs in their arms. It is said that Julius Cæsar once seeing some men thus occupied, derisively remarked of them, if the owners of their country had no other business.

THE HASKIN LETTER

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The fiftieth annual convention of the National Education association is now being held in Chicago. The annual session of that powerful organization constitutes the culminating event of each year in the educational world. It brings together the men and women who are the leaders in educational progress, and they exchange ideas, learn from one another, and all take home the sum of their several contributions. The proceedings of the convention of the N. E. A. are published in large 1,300-page annual volumes known as the "Addresses and Proceedings of the National Educational Association."
The present convention is one of unusual interest. More than 30,000 educators have gathered for the meeting,
and the program laid out for the several sessions calls for a discussion of all the questions foremost in the educational situation. There will be a consideration of the high school problem, how to bring the benefits of high school education within the reach of a greater number of boys and girls; the problem of using the public schools as a rallying ground for the public health crusade; rural life and rural education, how to make the latter fill the needs of the former; will claim its share of attention, while many men and women who have been laboring in the direction of making the rural school a more efficient center of the community will tell of results achieved and the prospects of the future.

The past decade has been one of unprecedented expansion in educational lines under the leadership of the N. E.
A. Thousands of teachers now are making teaching their life work instead of a mere stepping stone to something else; the states are nearly all building new normal schools and requiring higher standards of teaching qualifications; newer and better courses are being laid out in both rural and urban schools, courses fitted to the needs of the public who attend those schools; industrial training is being made possible in hundreds of communities where it was unheard of a decade ago; the health of the children of the country is being made a prime consideration in their education; medical inspection is being provided; and everywhere one may see evidences that out of a chaotic mixture of primitive educational ideas the American people are evolving a system which promises indefinitely to meet the needs of a great republic where a discriminating education is the greatest asset it may possibly have.

Vast Work Before Educators.
And yet one can but look at the story of the present status of education in the United States to appreciate what a vast work is before the educators of the country if the things they desire to bring about shall come to pass. It is estimated, for instance, that more than 10,000,000 children of school age in the United States are under 24 years of age, which precludes the presence of experience from half the schools. Half of the teachers of the country have not taught more than four terms; and at least a fourth of them will teach their first session next winter. The average teacher leaves the profession after four years. Half of all the teachers have only a high school education, or even less.

Furthermore, the statistics of education show that while there are 100,000,000
children of school age in the United States, less than 20,000,000 of them go to school; and only 14,000,000
of them are in school on the average day. According to P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education, more than half of the children of the country must look to the rural school for their education and training in citizenship. He considers the problem of leading these schools to the needs of the country as the greatest of the educational work today. He would make these schools instrumental in awakening the children who attend
them to the possibilities of farm life.
He finds that the child who lives
among buttercups and daisies knows less about the plants around him than the child whose playground at home is around an alley stoop, but who, thanks to leading these schools to the city educational system, is able to study nature under a competent instructor. How to change these things and to make the rural school what it should be is one of the problems with which the National Educational association long has been wrestling. Dr.
Claxton will be on hand to tell of his studies of this problem in the field.

Classify Educational Problems.
The N. E. A. has 17 departments, which deal with as many different classes of educational problems. The first of these is the department of superintendence, a department of importance that it meets on a different date from the association itself, in order that its work may be out of the way when the big convention convenes. It is composed of all those who are directing heads of education in their respective communities.
The second department is known as the national council of education, a sort of supreme court of education, which is a continuing body of 120
members, 20 being chosen each year,
the term of each being six years.
The 20 annually selected 20 are chosen by the council itself, while the other

LAWN TENNIS POPULAR IN JAPAN
From Consul Report.
Lawn tennis has become very popular among Japanese high school and Nagasaki, have tennis clubs, which for many years have been known as the "Lawn Tennis Club," at the various ports.

The leading foreign tennis club here is known as the Ladies Lawn

ready being manufactured in Japan,
there being six factories in Tokio

ROYAL SERVANTS WHO "COIN MONEY"

The London correspondent of the Washington Star.

King George's month is so long as to "better themselves," as the king goes, most people imagine, rather naturally, that wages in a royal household are high. But it is that though many of the king's valets are paid much better than in the service of fairly wealthy people, others are not paid nearly as well. For example, the housemaids, butmen and indoor porters in the royal household get from $100 to $200 a year, which is slightly lower, it is thought, than the average rate of pay for the inferior servants in wealthy establishments. An advantage of being the royal household, however, is that every servant, after five years' service, becomes entitled to a pension. At 60 he receives one equal to two-thirds of his or her salary.

It is the upper servants in the royal household who "coin money." These are the chief of the state pages, the use-stewards, the housekeeper and a chief of the grooms in waiting, each of whom is paid $3,000 a year in wages, and also pocket half as much in gratuities, or "tips," as they do in the service of the king. They each get at least $500 a year in tips from the king's visitors, while presents from the king and queen and other members of the royal family are worth $500 more. These upper servants, by the way, are paid monthly, by check, while the inferior servants get their "wages" weekly in cash.

Large Amounts Invested.

With such good incomes it is not surprising that most of the upper royal servants have good "balances" in the bank. King Edward's valet invested savings in land, which now brings him a useful income in the way of ground rents. Another of the servants, the late king's household formed a collection of antique silver, of which was a first-rate judge, that has been valued at $25,000, though he actually gave only about a quarter of that for it. With the means to educate his children well, most of these upper royal servants do so, and the sons of many of them hold important positions. One is in the Canadian valuation office on a salary of $5,000 a year, several are in the civil service, and one is a doctor and solicitor. Most of the more important royal servants speak French in addition to their own tongue, while those who, like the chief page and chief groom, are always on or less in attendance on visiting visitors must speak English, French and German.

The most highly paid royal servants in the world are those of the czar, the chief valet of the Russian royal household, draws $5,000 a year, the chief groom of the state apartments and the chief state page are paid $7,500, and many of the other servants have salaries of $4,000. The czar has a bigger staff of servants than that at Buckingham palace, but the servants of the German court are not as well paid as those who serve King George. The highest salary of the former is $3,500 a year, the highest of the latter is $2,800 a year.

DOZEN MEN EYED MEN DINE

From the Indianapolis Sun.

Twelve men with 12 good eyes and 12 glass eyes attended a dinner served by Harley D. Hartley, one of their number. The dinner was particularly good, and every man present should wear a glass eye. When dinner was over the 12 glass eyes were removed, wrapped in a neat package and sent to the proprietor of the hotel, with the request that he inspect and return them. He opened the package in the presence of the telephone man and the waiter.

PROTECTION OF MINERS

From Current Literature.

However Uncle Sam may have neglected his industrial workers in the past, his sense of social justice is being aroused at last, especially in the case of the miners. A federal bureau of mines has been created for the purpose of lessening the waste of life in mining as well as the waste of mineral resources. How necessary such a bureau is appears from the fact that in less than 30,000 miners were killed in explosions and other accidents in the United States within the last 10 years. The work of the United States government is held out by the Technische Bundesanstalt, a leading scientific center of the Kaiser's domain, as worthy of imitation by the German government.

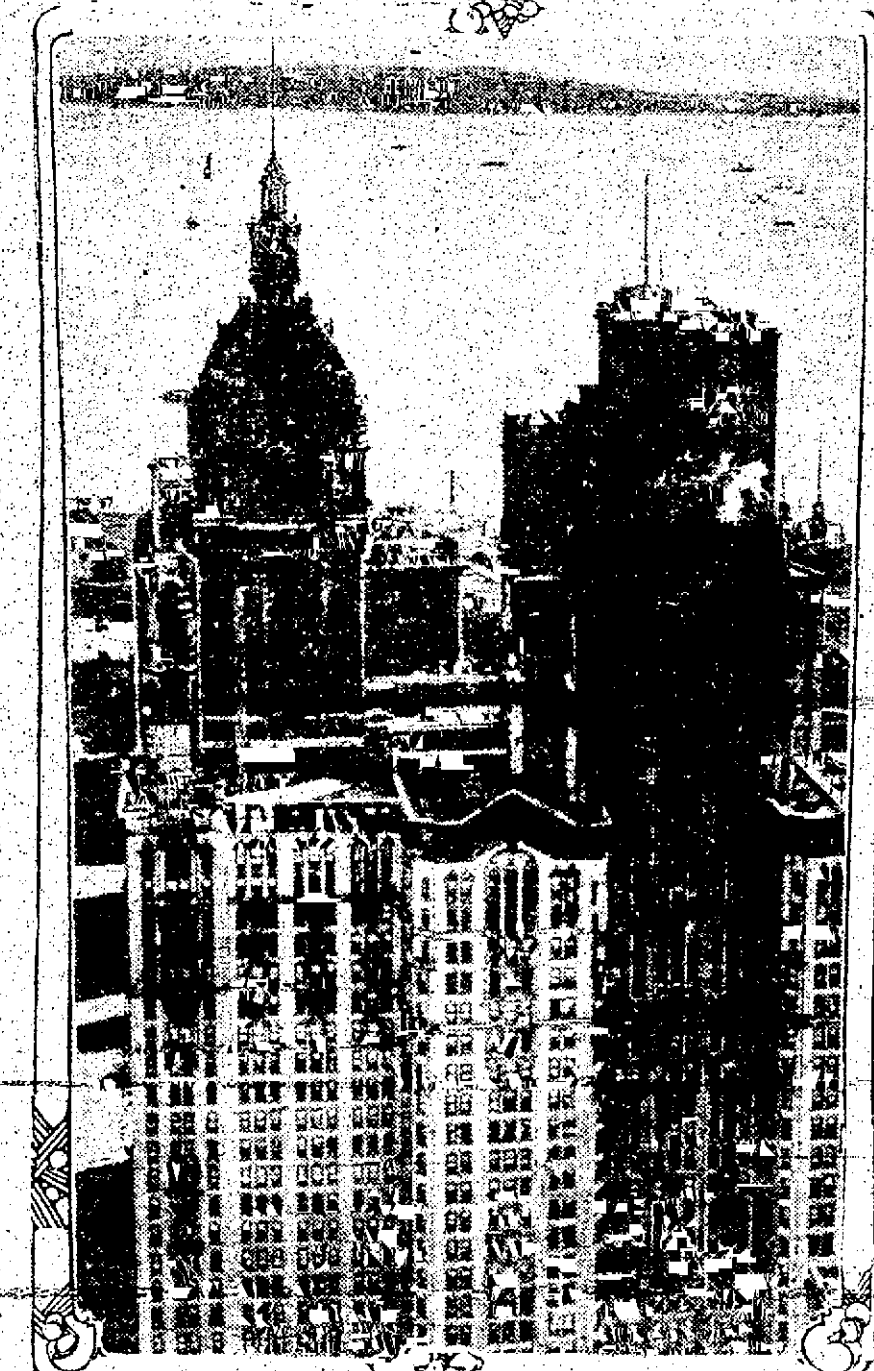

The most efficient weapons in fighting death underground are, according to Arthur W. Page, the oxygen helmet and the canary bird. In the Cross Mountain mine, Mr. Page explains, in the World's Work, the United States bureau of mines demonstrated the effectiveness of these two weapons. The oxygen helmets, like a diver's outfit, allowed the men to penetrate previously unexplored places which would otherwise have been impossible. The pulmonary which pumps oxygen into exhausted lungs, revived those who had been partially asphyxiated. Electric lights continued to shed their lustre where no other lights would stay lighted, and the canary birds, when the miners finally consented to their use, prevented asphyxiation by their timely warnings.

THINGS ABOUT THE CALENDAR

From the World for Technics.

The month of January always begins the same day in the week as the month of October. The same is true with regard to April and July, September and December. Again, February, March and November, also, begin with the same day of the week. This, however, is true only of normal years of 365 days.

A century can never begin on Wednesday, Friday or Saturday. Furthermore, the ordinary year ends on the same day of the week as it begins.

Miller the Quaintest Americans Start Olympiad of the Latest Hopes by Breaking Former Marks

Lowell Wins Ullrich Cup Taylor and Gillett in Tie

By W. W. NAUGHTON

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—There have been a few hopes and a few hopes, but as yet no possible contender of pugilistic promise to the Californian pugilist has developed under circumstances similar to those which attended the coming of the big Charlie Miller to San Francisco.

Miller is a Scotchman, a Roman Catholic, with a thoroughly English education, with a very incident of the day's existence, is as serious as a smile on the face. Once, out of a sudden, he came to a push button attachment for him, and it was a long time before he could explain the joke to him. He thought the conversion of the chair into a push button was due to some vulgar of the climate or that maybe it was something he ate that affected his muscles.

When Miller first, having been employed as a prizefighter, he was employed as a motorist on the street cars. He used to present himself at the training quarters of a prominent pugilist who happened to be undergoing preparation for a match, and volunteer as sparring partner.

He asked to meet and for that matter the harder they fought him, the better he liked it. Once Stanley Ketchel picked the largest pair of gloves he could find and fought at Miller without stopping. The motorist was knocked out after ten rounds, but the next day he was on again, ready to take his medicine. It got to be that he was quite a drawing card around the camps, the attendance being visibly swelled whenever it was known that big Charlie Miller was to appear.

In June Miller became a standby with promoters of four-round bouts in San Francisco, and he continued to be the heavyweight champion of the Queensberry ring. He loved the stress of fierce fighting, and he had an utter disregard for punishment.

But he did not catch on to the technique of things, somehow. Of the ordinary leads and counters of boxing he did not seem able to obtain a grasp. As they used to say of Miller in his club days, he could not hit the post-office unless you let him swing at it.

With the Friday night patrons Miller became as popular as with the habitués of the leading clubs. He was punched with a heavy left hand, and he performed with a tolerable degree of success. It was a by-word, that Miller never struck the issue, no matter whom he was opposed to, and he could always be depended upon to furnish a display of sound and lofty fighting that could not be duplicated in any part of the world. And he continued to take himself and everybody and everything seriously.

One night at Dreamland, they brought a German band from one of the street corners to serenade Miller when he entered the ring. Then the announcer presented Charlie with a string of frankfurters in behalf of a tribute of admiration.

He never cracked a smile, but he performed more dashing. When he reached his full momentum the ring ropes belied and the posts vibrated. The press men wished that night that they had seats up in the gallery instead of under the lee of the fighting platform.

Miller's most brilliant achievement was the spilling of Al Kaufman's combative blood. The two heavyweights met at Dreamland on the evening of June 21, and Miller gained the decision after four rounds of furious work. Miller's great bulk, strength and assimilative qualities stood him in good stead. By continued rushing he kept Kaufman off balance, and did not permit Billy Delaney's former protégé to set himself properly for a right clinch at the close.

The sensational moment of the encounter was when Miller floored Kaufman in the second round. And such a punch! It was a right back-hander delivered seemingly when Miller was drawing his ponderous arm back to get into position for a swing. Anyhow, it floored Kaufman.

Miller probably was the more surprised of the two men but Kaufman was the one who was hurt. When the referee stepped in to stop the fight, Miller went after him, and it was then Big Charlie was seen at his very best from a mirth-provoking standpoint. Such swings and wallows were never seen on land or sea. Frequently when he missed Kaufman, the referee felt the force of the deliveries and once when making a ponderous downward chop, big Charlie pounded the floor.

The round ended without further casualties, and as Miller stalked to his corner he threw out his chest, and seemed to be straining to muscle his way out of the ring.

It was that knockout that gained Miller the verdict. It was argued that the referee might have called the bout a draw, but Jones the referee, it was thought, that Miller would afford Kaufman as much amusement as he afforded Ketchel and instead Miller came out on top.

From being a joke, Miller has become a serious contender. It is felt that he will never again be "killed" by any pugilist, but he has gained confidence and has formulated a style of fighting that is baffling to the followers who are supposed to know him.

He is a noisy and awkward as an element, crashing through underbrush, and he has a capacity for making the referee look like a clown. He is a fighter who prides himself on his sitting power.

Miller is stated with his success. He is still modest, but he is ambitious. He claims the right to rank with Louie McCarty and Al Barber, and he really seems to mean it. It is his negative qualities that count for as much as his positive ones. He can hit and he can take a hit.

Miller's real name is the way is Joseph Christy, so there is a prospect of his being christened "Cottonmouth Joe" if he ever rises to the pugilistic heights.

JOHNSON WAS READY TO END MILL IN 10TH ROUND

CHICAGO, July 6.—When Jack Johnson stepped off the train here, a crowd of local admirers greeted him. The champion was greeted in a white Pullman car and topped by a band. Panama hat. Mrs. Johnson, his wife, carried a tiny white rabbit that blinched when the sun struck the huge diamond pendant at her throat. Johnson told the newspaper men at the station that he did much better and better work while in training than he did at any time during his fight with Flynn.

"I wanted Flynn to have every chance in the world," said Johnson, "and that is why I let the fight go as long as I did. I could have ended it at any time by putting Flynn to sleep, and I had made up my mind to knock him out in the next round."

Johnson said that during the fight he felt his stomach unprotected, possibly to distract the charge, that he was not in good condition and that his model of living had weakened him. He said he allowed Flynn to pound him in the stomach several times, and that he secretly felt it.

SOUTHERN TENNIS TITLE IS WON BY C. H. SMITH

ATLANTA, Ga., July 6.—Carlton V. Smith, of Atlanta, won the Southern tennis championship today by defeating C. H. Charest of Atlanta in the finals of the Southern tennis tournament. Smith defeated Charest three straight games, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

ENGLISHMAN CAPTURES FRENCH GOLF HONORS

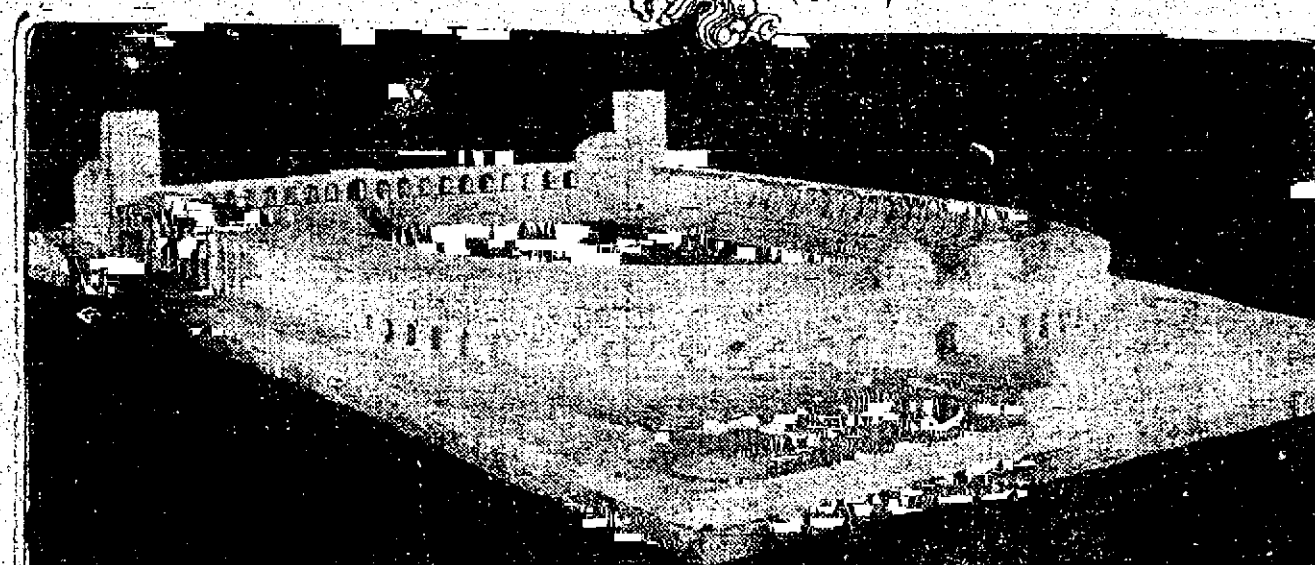

PARIS, July 6.—The Hon. Michael Scott, an Englishman, today won the amateur golf championship of France on the Lacanville links. Scott defeated the American, J. J. Anderson, yesterday in the championship of three up and down play.

STOCKHOLM, July 6.—The glory of the opening of the Olympic games of 1912 should be divided between Sweden and the United States. Sweden gets the lion's share for the impressive stage setting she provided for the contests, which, with the natural beauties of Stockholm—its parks and palaces and lakes, and the moving ceremonial with which the king inaugurated the meeting, makes it by far the most memorable international festival ever held.

America's share of the honor is due to the remarkable fashion in which her brawny young men set to work on the cinder path. They ran away with heat after heat in the trials of the 100 and 800 meters; they outdid the expectations of their trainers and completely upset the calculations the public had made. They left their old-time British rivals far behind.

With five American sprinters—Drew, Meyer, Craig, Lippincott and Belote—and the South African, Patching, to run the final in the 100 meters, that event may be written down for the United States. With eight men out of 18 to compete in the semifinals of the 800 meters, five of whom won their respective heats in the trials, it would seem as though the United States had an excellent opportunity to annex that event also. Trainer Mike Murphy's cup of joy is full.

The smashing of the Olympic record by D. F. Lippincott, University of Pennsylvania, in the sixteenth heat of the 100 meters event, puts that runner in the hero class. His time was 10.45 seconds. The only cloud in the sky is due to an unfortunate accident suffered by the Springfield high school boy, H. P. Drew, who strained a tendon of his leg in the semifinals of the 100 meters, the first heat of which he won. This may bar him from the final.

YESTERDAY'S NEW OLYMPIC RECORDS.

100-meter dash, P. F. Lippincott, 10.45 seconds.
100-meter swim, any style, "Duke" Kahanamoku, of Hawaii, member of American team, 1:02.25.
Javelin, E. Lemming, Sweden, 40 meters, 44 centimeters.
Winners of former Olympic games.
London, 1908—America, England, second, Sweden third.
Athens, 1906—America, England, second, Sweden third.
St. Louis, 1904—America, Canada, second, Greece third.
Paris, 1900—America, England, second, France third.
Athens, 1896—America, England, second, Greece third. (The Olympic games were revived in 1896 by the king of Greece.—Ed.)

The world's record with the javelin made by E. Lemming, the Swedish champion, whose effort was 60 meters, and 44 centimeters, was not unexpected, but the Hawaiian swimmer, "Duke" Kahanamoku, covered himself with glory by winning the 100 meters, 1:02.25, which gave the United States the second world's record of the meeting.

The picture which nearly 3,000 bronzed athletes, picked men of the world, with the flags of the several nations planted before them, faced the royal box in which were seated the king and more of the royal family, while the bands played and thousands sang the Swedish hymn, was one never to be forgotten.

The carnival spirit pervades Stockholm. The Olympic contrasting cheerfully with the more solemn atmosphere of London in 1908. There the solemn and flag waving was frowned down upon as bad form; American spectators were criticised for their lack of enthusiasm and tolerance. Here flags and badges are thicker than leaves on trees. Nearly every national flag breaks into a roar when its men give the smallest exercise.

The dark-skinned delegates from the Orient sat in a row and found themselves far outclassed by their European and American brethren. A Turk conspicuous in a flaming sarge-tan jersey, brought the crowd to a halt for a brief moment. Then he faded into the background. A tall Japanese trailed far behind through the 100 meters.

DIAMOND SCULLS WON BY POWELL ON THAMES

LONDON, July 6.—In the presence of the king and queen and thousands of spectators the famous Thames regatta won the historic Thames cup, the opening event of the final day of the Henley regatta. The king and queen joined the great water carnival in the ancient royal barge built for King William III, and which has not been used for nearly 100 years.

The barge has been especially decorated for the occasion and was gorgeously decorated in red and gold with silken canopy and drapery. It was piloted by Royal bargewaster W. E. East and six of the king's watermen clad in uniform. Under uniform, considered with the royal oar and crown. Except for walking in royal funeral or coronation processions, this was the first time the great watermen have had for many years, but as they are all experienced boatmen they had no difficulty in handling the manly craft.

The opening event, the Thames cup, was between the Paris club and the eight representing St. Johns, Sydney. The visitors won by a scant length in 7:12.

In the race for the grand challenge cup the Sydney club of Australia defeated the crack London eight.

The Sydney crew won the other two races of the day. Captain W. W. Powell defeated A. McCallum. Powell won as he pleased, McCallum giving up before the race was half over. The winner's time was 8:12.

KING OF DENVER SIGNS WITH PHILADELPHIA CLUB

DENVER, July 6.—Johnnie King, the star Sacred Heart college pitcher, has signed with the Philadelphia National League baseball club. Johnnie King, a native of Philadelphia, was drafted by the Phillies and received a $5,000 bonus from the famous catcher-manager of the Phillies yesterday according to reports and direct King to join the Philadelphia club on Wednesday, July 17.

King has been a student of the Sacred Heart college for the past two years, and during that time he has made an excellent record. He struck out 20 batters in his game last season against the school of Mines. For the past year he has averaged 11 strikeouts to a game.

He lost only two games this season, one to the University of Colorado by a score of 1 to 0, and another to the University of Denver by a score of 3 to 1. In the former he allowed only four hits and scored 11 strikeouts. In the second game he had 16 strikeouts and allowed only three hits.

Scott McCallum, the last year's star pitcher, has been drafted by the Phillies and along with Manager Allen, who is a native of the Western league, has the reputation of developing young pitchers.

King is only 19 years of age and weighs 170 pounds, standing six feet in height. He has wonderful speed and a curve. King will pitch for the Phillies in Sunday's game at Brooklyn. He will be King's first game in the big league.

The main event of the Colorado Springs golf club yesterday, an 18-hole handicap match for consolation cup, offered by B. J. Ullrich, president of the club, was carried off by R. F. Lowell with a net score of 72. The trophy was offered as a consolation prize to those upon whom fortune failed to smile in the big match July 4, and interest in the contest was attested by the large number of competitors. The Greeley team, said to be one of the stoutest in the north part of the state, will meet the Zooz in the evening this afternoon at 8:15, Zooz time. Hastings probably will be in the box for the locals, with Deer-Green Hall, which is three separate athletes, telling for Greeley.

Early announcement of the respective lineup is as follows:

TAMM PARTY RETURNS

Oscar T. Tamm of this city, arrived home yesterday from the Johnson-Flynn fight at Las Vegas, N. M., having made the drive with a party of friends in his Panhard touring car. G. A. Goings, his chauffeur, drove the car to Las Vegas the first of the week, to get the Tamm party. The round trip of 470 miles was made in a little less than four days, with the roads in frightful condition in some parts of the territory covered. Like the rest of the local fans, they report the fight a joke.

SHARP DEFEATS MORRIS

Ray M. Sharp and C. C. Morris, who tied in the nine-hole Y. M. C. A. golf match on the Mesa links Thursday afternoon, played off yesterday. Sharp winning by a score of 72 to 74. Thursday's scores were 61, neither contestant playing up to his game yesterday.

Rivers Was Knocked Out, Welch Insists; Champion Says He Will Fight Joe Again

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—"There wasn't a foul blow struck in the Wolgast-Rivers fight. Rivers was knocked out. This was Ad Wolgast's reply today to a query as to when he will be ready to conclude his pugilistic arguments with Joe Rivers, who, future records will say, was knocked out by the champion at Yonkon, July 4, 1912.

Wolgast is considering a two months' hunting trip to Alaska this summer. It is possible that he and Joe Rivers will head a party. Upon his return, he says, he will be ready to fight Rivers. He favors Labor day and Veterans for the bout.

Rivers wants to meet Wolgast again at the earliest opportunity. Meanwhile Manager Lew has asked Promoter McCarty to arrange a match for Rivers with a good lightweight. McCarty has reached no decision regarding the disposition of his gold championship belt. "The trophy reposes in a safe deposit vault."

Wolgast said today that he is considering an offer from a San Francisco promoter for a match next month. One Round Hogan is the possible opponent.

FLYNN WILL GO EAST FOR BOUT WITH PALZER

PUEBLO, July 6.—Jim Flynn, who lost the championship fight to Jack Johnson at Las Vegas Thursday, was given a big reception upon his return here tonight. He was met at the railroad station by a band and a large delegation of fellow townsmen, who cheered him loudly to the big fireman, despite the results of Thursday's battle.

Flynn will spend a week at his home in Pueblo, and will then leave for the east to arrange for a match with Palzer. He declares that the interference of the authorities at Las Vegas robbed him of the victory, and says he will meet Johnson again as soon as a match can be arranged. He expects to first dispute with all white hope aspirants for championship honors.

"I would fight Johnson again tomorrow," said Flynn tonight. "I would not have resorted to foul tactics if Johnson had not tried to foul me. I know that I can beat the larva from the big cock."

George S. Elstun of the Alamo Hotel, by catching trout weighing 115 pounds at Nas, Colo., this week in the waters of the Flying Pan river, holds the record for the largest trout caught there this season. He returned from Nas this week, accompanied by Mrs. Elstun. They enjoyed a 10-day outing at the popular resort on the other slope.

cubbling are wonderful, but the code worked out by Barok is more marvelous than any of them. He labored many months in laying its foundation, and he has worked steadily for years on its elaboration. Those who ought to know say it is the most wonderful code in use today. It was employed first when Kovacs had a thousand clients. There was a bit of a sensation among Hungarians when it was introduced. No wonder. Kovacs an-pointed to his customers that he would cable their money abroad at no extra charge; that he would guarantee to deliver the money at any post-office in Hungary within 36 hours or his receipt by train; and that he would guarantee, under ordinary conditions, to furnish the receipt of the recipient to the sender of the money within 10 days or two weeks of the time the client started the money on its journey.

After waiting three weeks or a month for an acknowledgment that their remittances had arrived safely, the innovation had a strong appeal to them. It served to add impetus to Kovács's business. He got more and more clients in the east—the west, the north, the south—and the middle west. Year after year the number of his clients grew. When he had 10,000, he thought he had a good many; but soon he had 20,000, then 40,000, 50,000, 75,000, 100,000, 200,000. He had stepped beyond the line of Hungary into Rumania, Bulgaria, Bosnia, Serbia, Montenegro—in fact, all that great southeastern European territory. Of every client he has a record not only covering every step of his career in America, but also a record of his family in Europe.

A duplicate of these records is kept in the bank in Budapest that acts as the distributing agent for Kovacs. The code of Barok embraces each and every person in this monumental record. Today the business of Kovacs amounts hundreds of millions of dollars a year. In one cipher, cablegrams of from 60 to 70 words are able to cover from 200 to 300 cents' worth of business. In one cipher word of 10 letters he can put the accounts of five, six, seven or eight clients. Each 10 letters, when translated, will give the names and addresses of five, six, seven or eight persons who are sending money, the amounts they are sending, and the names and addresses of the persons who are to get the money. TRUE TALES of PERIL AND HEROISM

TOLD BY LIVING PERSONS WHO FIGURED IN THEM

THE MUTINY ON THE FLORA C.

A Tale of the Rush to the California Gold Fields in '49, and the Tragic Death of Capt. Tim Meredith.

AS THE FIRST MATE SPRANG AT HIM, HE FIRED AND THE MUTINEER CRUMPLED.

(William Harris, who tells this story, lives at Greenvale, Long Island. He is too old to follow the sea, but he has a little capital laid by for his old age and lives where he can see many of the few sailing vessels left. He is in his late sixties, and visits New York from time to time to care for his interests there.)

"Terrible Tim," we called him in the '40's, but when we spoke to him we said "Mr. Meredith," and we said it respectfully. He was a hard skipper, hard as the "icked end of a bayonet," but true as an oak stick. Many a good captain was baffled off by his own quartermaster in '49, and the early '50s, but those who knew him calculated that "Terrible Tim" Meredith was hard enough to stripe sparks off flint, meaning the gold hunters who made up most of the crew of the Flora C., out of New York for San Francisco harbor, in 1850.

I was rated as an able seaman and matters of discipline did not worry me much as we slipped out through the Narrows and tacked away past the Hook. It was just like the beginning of any other voyage to me, but looking back I can see that trouble was in the air from the very start. Hard work never worried me and I had not noticed particularly that the new hands had been rather backward about the heavy hoisting while we were stowing the cargo, which consisted mostly of calico cloth and mining machinery. Later I recalled this. I didn't take very well to the new men. I had nothing in common with them, and altogether they were a pretty run crowd.

There was one thing I did not like. That was the way Mr. Barlow, the second mate, mixed with the men. A seaman doesn't want his officers messing with him. It looks bad and it is bad. We know the old man wouldn't like it, either, but he never seemed to tumble to it.

Another thing which didn't please me was the way the second mate treated the old seamen. There were six of us and all but one had sailed with Terrible Tim before. We loved the old man because most of his terribleness was exhibited in enforcing a square deal in one way or another. Strange to say, the more familiar the mate got with the new men, the siller he grew to us old ones. All the work was put on our shoulders and I noticed several times when I was busy about some routine job, two of three of the landlubbers stood around and watched with superior grins of amusement on their faces. It wasn't pleasant and a little spirit of mutiny grew up between the two factions. After a while two of the old men, Waters and Scott, seemed to side in and pal with the other faction, which left four of us pretty much alone. At mess one night someone said something about the captain referring to him as "Terrible Tim."

"Tut!" snorted Wilkins, one of the men who had shipped as a seaman to get to the gold country. "Terrible Tim? I don't know him. He's not so terrible that an able-bodied citizen from New York might take a fall out of him. You sea dogs," very sneeringly, "make a car out of that old codger, Terrible Tim!"

"Don't let him hear you say it, mate," I said.

"I'll tell it to him," said Wilkins, "the very next time he tries to bullyrag me. I won't stand for it."

At that instant Mr. Barlow stuck his head down the companionway. Somehow I felt he had been listening for a time, but if he had overheard the talk, he said never a word of reprimand to Wilkins.

"Four of you men run aloft and furl the topsails," he shouted, and then named the four of our little clique. There was nothing for it but to obey. We had hardly sprung into the rigging before Mr. Barlow disappeared below decks. There was no reason for furling the topsails that I could see, and I scented mystery. It was an easy guess something underhand was going on aboard the Flora C. It puzzled me and I admit I worried about it a little.

That night I stayed on deck late,

MALIGNANT UNBELIEF

Golden Text.—John iii:19.—"This is the judgment, that the light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the light; for their works were evil."

Mark iii:20-35.

(20) And the multitude sought to kill him again, so that they could not so much as eat bread. (21) And when his friends heard of it, they went out to take him, for they said, he is beside himself. (22) And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, he hath been evil, and by the prince of the devils he is possessed. (23) And he called them unto him, and said unto them in parables, how can Satan cast out Satan? (24) And if a kingdom cannot stand, and if a house be divided against itself, that house will not be able to stand. (25) And if Satan has cast out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (26) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (27) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (28) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (29) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (30) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (31) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (32) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (33) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (34) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil. (35) But if he casts out himself, he is divided, and is evil.

allowing his enthusiasm to carry him beyond the bounds of propriety, and that it was necessary that he should not be restrained. Acting upon this conviction, they immediately set forth in order to carry out this intention. Now this was the action of unbelief, not wilfully malignant, for unquestionably it was born of affection for him, but it was ignorantly malignant. Of course the supposition is an idle one, but for the sake of argument let it be supposed that he had yielded to the constraint of their love. Such yielding would have meant the abandonment of his work. As we have said, the supposition is an idle one, and clear light is thrown upon their mistaken attitude by the words which the Lord spoke in answer to the declaration that his mother and his brethren were seeking for him. He declared that the kingdom of the Lord was about him, who did the will of God, was closer than that of any earthly relationship. Now these men were men of faith, men who believed in him, and this were able to understand the subsequent confusion with him in his temptations (Luke xxii:28).

The central matter, however, of the parable is that of the malignant unbelief of his foes, as expressed in the criticism of the Jerusalem scribes. In Matthew's account the fact is recorded that he cast out a demon, and this gave occasion for the criticism which they offered, namely, that he cast out demons by the prince of the devils. The scribes of Jerusalem, however, declared that what they said was illogical, and moreover impossible. Illogical, for a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand, and impossible, for the casting out of a demon means that the one doing so is stronger than the one in possession.

The whole atmosphere of the story makes it evident that these men knew perfectly well how untrue their statement was. They were indeed malignant unbelief. What they said was a lie, and they knew it, and the secret of their criticism was that of a refusal to accept the inevitable deduction because of personal animosity. The light was shining round about them, they refused to obey it because they loved the darkness, and that because their own deeds were evil. Their professed unbelief was based upon moral turpitude.

The words of Jesus to these men are very remarkable. First, they were characterized by great and tender graciousness as he said, "All their sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and their blasphemies wherewithsoever they shall blaspheme." Matthew records him as having said, "Whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him." That undoubtedly is a thought in the statement which is found in Mark. To this tender and patient announcement he added perhaps the most solemn warning that ever fell from his lips in the words, "Whosoever shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin." This he said because they said, "He hath an unclean spirit." So far their blasphemy had been blasphemy against himself, and it might be forgiven. But as we have seen, they were tending to the confines of refusing the testimony of the Spirit concerning him, which would be the final method of God. To commit that sin would be to make impossible any redemption.

All this is focused for us in the Golden Text. Admit the fact of light, and then recognize that to refuse to believe in that light is to commit the sin which is unforgivable. In other words, in order to continually in evil practices men love the darkness, and refuse to exhibit themselves to the call of the light, they take up an attitude which brings them under the ultimate judgment of the final condemnation.

The light given to our lesson is that of "Malignant Unbelief." That is not wholly inaccurate, but it is somewhat unfortunate in that it is partial, for it fastens attention upon the unbelief of the Pharisees and scribes, and leaves the unbelief of his friends, which is also referred to in the paragraph appointed as lesson.

The Golden Text is also partial in the same sense. We shall certainly lose some of the values of our lesson unless we recognize the two manifestations of unbelief. Of course it is perfectly true that in some senses unbelief is always malignant, whether it be that of friend or foe, but there is a distinction to be made.

Let us take time to examine the two manifestations which we have in the story. And first we will take the unbelief of his friends. In order that we may do so, it is necessary that we notice carefully the connection between verses 21 and 23 in our story. In the first of these we have a statement of the attitude of his friends toward him when their hearts of the carelessness of his tale. Considering that he was "beside himself," they went forth to take hold on him. In verse 23 we have an account of the arrival of his mother and his brethren, undoubtedly those referred to in the previous verse as his friends. In the interval between their starting out and their arrival, the manifestations of unbelief on the part of the Pharisees had taken place.

Considering first the unbelief of his friends, we notice that they heard about him. That is characterized by the words, "the multitude sought to kill him again, so that they could not so much as eat bread." The report of his teaching his friends, and their carelessness, led to the conclusion that he was beside himself, that is, that he was smoking and thinking. There was a still breeze and it was rather cool. So late in the evening I climbed into the rigging before Mr. Barlow disappeared below decks. There was no reason for furling the topsails that I could see, and I scented mystery. It was an easy guess something underhand was going on aboard the Flora C. It puzzled me and I admit I worried about it a little.

That night I stayed on deck late,

matter was arranged according to the etiquette of the sea.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?" said Mr. Meredith, gruffly. The mate rose to his feet, a little anxiously, for he knew I had gone over his head in the matter of approaching the captain.

"I break the news to the Captain," said Mr. Meredith, "I said, boldly, 'I know, sir, I should not have come here, but the safety of the ship and the crew depended upon it. I had to sneak away from the other men and there was no time to lose.'"

"Sneak away from the other men, sir? No time to lose? What cheap melodrama is this on board your ship?"

"It is no cheap melodrama, sir," I replied. "It is a matter of life and death. It is mutiny, Mr. Meredith."

The mate ripped out a salt sea oath. There was no word from the captain, but he threw away a cigar which was but half-smoked.

"Who are the mutinous men?" he asked. That was his way, no secret. No questions as to how I knew. He got at the pitch of the matter at once.

I named all the men who had been shipped to work their way to the gold fields and added the names of Henderson and Miller, two of the old men whom I thought implicated.

"Henderson and Miller," I said, "I cannot be sure of it, but they have been loyal and they have been all the time in company with the dissatisfied men."

"Who is the leader?" asked the captain.

"Mr. Barlow," I said.

The first mate smashed his fist onto the table, but said nothing. The captain closed his eyes for just a second and he was frightfully calm. Mr. Barlow had been with him for several years.

"Now tell us all you know about it," said Mr. Meredith.

I described how I had overheard the conversation on the forward deck and repeated it word for word. I had not forgotten a syllable.

"What do you make of it?" Mr. Meredith asked the first mate.

"Piracy," said Mr. Smithers. "Nothing short of that. The sharks are going to lay about the Horn waiting for homeward bound vessels with bullion. Some trick to get aboard, and then—well, Davy Jones' locker will be filled with honest seamen and those scavengers will get to port with the swag. That's all I can make of it."

"That's how I see it," said the captain. "But will leave 'em to, quick as chain lightning and rake 'em fore an aft."

"Mr. Smithers," he said, after a moment of thought, "you stay here with me to talk this over. Farris go to Mr. Smithers' room and get his pistols."

"They're under the bunk in the pine chest," said the mate, "and they're loaded."

"Bring them here," said the captain, "then go forward and round the men you say honest."

I hurried from the cabin. What happened there in my absence was told to me by Mr. Smithers later.

The captain went to his bunk and produced two pistols. They were loaded and he was about to hand one to the mate when the handle of the door turned. Quicker than an albatross can dive, he slipped them into his lap under the table, leaving his hands free. The door opened and Mr. Barlow stepped into the cabin.

"Good morning, sir," he said, very pleasantly.

Mr. Meredith nodded.

"There's something important to say to you, sir," whined the second mate, with a glance toward Mr. Smithers.

"Mr. Smithers' presence doesn't impair my hearing," said the captain bluntly.

"There's trouble brewing on board," said the second mate. "Some of the men are disloyal."

"Some of the men are mutinous," roared the captain, interrupting him. "I know you, sir. There is mutiny on board and you are leading it."

Barlow gets the drop on the Captain.

The second mate whipped his right hand to the breast of his coat, there was a gleam of metal, and he leveled a pistol at Mr. Meredith's head.

"You thought you'd get the nicks of me, didn't you?" he sneered. "Mighty smart, Terrible Tim. But I'd advise you to put your hands up on the table and lay that pistol over here hiding in your lap, where I can see it. But first," he jeered, "just care that the business and don't pointing my way. I know your little tricks."

"With no show of emotion the captain reached one of the pistols and showed it butt first across the table.

"Henderson look the uppon and put it in his pocket," Mr. Smithers was standing near the captain. He was unarmed. It was all he could do to keep his eyes from letting out the captain's secret by glancing at his lap. He saw the mate's pistol and he employed it. He knew that one of the pistols was held tight between his knee and the under side of the table top.

"Now," said the second mate, "sneak away from the other men and put it in your pocket. I'll see you and your whole gang of low-born sharks make food for the fish before I give you this ship."

"Who are your gang?" said Mr. Meredith.

"My crew," said Barlow, "consists of all the men on board this ship except you, and your hardy first mate, and four seamen who, I guess, will join us when they hear my plans. I suppose you're willing to listen to reason?"

"Reason be damned," said Captain Meredith, in a fierce voice that sounded ominous. "I'll see you and your whole gang of low-born sharks make food for the fish before I give you this ship."

"Just at that instant I was opening the door of the captain's cabin. I had heard the voices and knew matters were serious. So intent were the men that they did not hear me. The first mate came door opening and the captain came door closing. The second mate was standing by the door, looking at the captain. At the instant when I was able to see into the room, the captain was leaning forward slightly, his hands had slipped to the edge of the table. He was reaching for his other pistol, but I did not know it. Had I known the outcome might have been different.

"No you don't," snarled Barlow. "I know you're got another iron there, Terrible Tim."

The Door Creaks—Then Murder.

Just at that instant the door creaked. Barlow started to turn his head but gathered himself. Simultaneously the captain had grabbed for his pistol. There was a flash, Captain Meredith sank forward. Barlow wheeled, but I was too quick. As the first mate sprang at him I fired and the mutineer crumpled.

Mr. Smithers pounced on him and wrenched both pistols from him, but Barlow could not have used them. He lay very still and even in the excitement of the situation I felt sick. We hurried to the captain, but he was sitting slumped forward, both arms hanging on the table. His shirt was stained red, and his heart, directly beneath the bullet wound, was not beating.

There was no time for sentimentality. Not even to move the body of Mr. Meredith, still strong and hard as death. There was a high wind and the noise of it in the rigging made it unlikely that the shots had been heard forward, but we could not risk anything.

"Hup to Barlow's room," ordered Mr. Smithers, who was now captain. "And if he has not distributed the pistols, which he must have concealed there, bring them to me."

It was a matter of seconds before I was back in the cabin with five weapons. I had found in the second mate's cabin. Smithers had meantime carried the captain's body to the bunk and covered it with a sheet. Barlow's huddled form on the floor he had hidden under a huge slocker.

"Ask Wilkins and Watson to step here," said Captain Smithers, "but don't go unarmed."

Watson was the bosun. I soon had the two men in the cabin, having told Wilkins that he would find Mr. Barlow there. Wilkins looked frightened when he entered the cabin and saw the signs of a struggle. Watson did not know what to make of it. He was one of the loyal men.

"Wilkins," said Captain Smithers without preliminary, "the jig is up. You might as well give in. The captain is dead and so is Barlow. We are armed and you are not. If I choose I can put about, take all your men to a United States port and hold you on a charge of mutiny and complicity in the murder of the captain."

Wilkins was trembling.

"What I shall do," went on Captain Smithers, "I have not yet decided. Watson, go pipe the men to quarterdeck."

Watson did as he was bid.

"Who are the men with you?" the new captain asked of Wilkins.

The man hung his head. There was really something of a scuffle of honor about him.

"I can't tell, sir," he said.

"Very well," said Mr. Smithers, "I don't intend to lay myself open to another attempt of this kind. We will go on deck. Mr. Farris and I will stand either side of you. In the pockets, your peak-jackets will be loaded pistols. If you do not follow instructions, you will be shot on the spot. You will see the men of your party to step forward from the rest of the group."

Farris as a ghost, Wilkins walked twice up to the quarterdeck, where the crew was assembled.

"Now," said Mr. Smithers, Wilkins hesitated. I poked the end of my pistol into his ribs and he knew what it meant; although it was still in his pocket.

We Discover the Conspirators.

"The time has come," he stammered, "all our men step forward."

Half a dozen men stepped bold away from the main group. Not others hesitated and seemed to be a lost cause, looking suspicious at one another and at us. Faintly, they stepped forward. The men whom the declared loyal looked bewildered, by made no motion to step forward.

"Men," said Captain Smithers, "five a seaman as ever pulled a rope worked his way to a captain's papers dead in his cabin. Barlow, the second mate, shot him and Barlow is dead. I am now captain of this ship and Mr. Farris is my mate. These men have stepped forward as mutineers and Barlow was their leader."

Then he called the names of the loyal men, one at a time, and told them to go to the cabin for the pistols had left there. When they were back he said:

"From now on, you men are to be armed. These men who have insisted are to be shot down at the first sign of trouble. Do you understand?"

We buried Terrible Tim Meredith sea and read a service in memory of him and Mr. Barlow alike, for all matters of civility and decency were observed. The men were awed by the way mutiny was handled and there was further trouble. At Frisco they were discharged and we shipped some, a real crew of real seamen.

Some Plain and Fancy Gyroscopes—Whether They Are Lighter if They Spin—Also Some Gyroscopical Freaks

At the recent soiree of the Royal Society in London, a number of interesting and curious applications of gyroscopic action were exhibited. As yet no simple and nonmathematical explanation of this puzzling phenomenon has been generally accepted. The mathematical explanation is, however, simple enough, and then believe themselves by writing you out five or six quarto pages of higher mathematics. One of them has turned gravitation upside down in an effort to illuminate the subject. For the layman, however, the gyroscopic still remains a mechanical freak.

One of the gyroscopes at the soiree was hung from a wire frame by two chains. The frame could be tilted, and when this was done, and the proper rotating speed had been attained, the box containing the gyroscope swung arm over arm along the wires. This machine was electrically driven. Another hand-sprung gyroscope in a box with legs, produced a good imitation of walking when the box was tilted. There was also a gyrostatic bicycle model, the handle-bars being connected with a gyroscope on the saddle. The model was self-righting and under the automatic control of the gyroscope, which behaved exactly like a rider so far as keeping the machine upright was concerned.

Another piece of apparatus was designed to show the possible danger of the gyroscopic effect to aeroplanists. A model aeroplane was fixed with a gyroscope instead of a propeller. When suspended with the gyroscope in operation it was shown that a force tending to push the aeroplane toward one side caused a sudden diving of the latter, while if the side force was reversed the tendency of the nose of the aeroplane was to rise. The rotary engines used in aeroplanes and the propellers have some gyroscopic effect, and it is quite possible that their action in this way may account for some of the puzzling accidents to aeroplanists.

The earth itself is a great gyroscope, and one of the exhibits consisted of Professor Love's apparatus first shown to the British association two years ago, for illustrating the slight wobbling of the earth's axis, which causes it to describe a small irregular spiral not more than 60 feet in diameter, probably.

Alcohol and Hospitals.

The action of the senate in passing, on May 29, the bill relieving scientific institutions from the somewhat formidable collection of penalties that have accumulated against them for technical violations of the laws prescribing how untaxed alcohol may be used, is of particular interest to the hospitals. The bill authorizes the internal revenue authorities upon appeals from scientific establishments, to remit all special charges made against them for failure to comply with sections 3297 and 3298 of the revised statutes (dealing with the use of alcohol and denatured alcohol), for offenses committed prior to March 1, 1912. Many hospitals, it appears, have not properly denatured their alcohol, but as it was not used as a beverage, it has been exempted from the laws. The bill, however, passed unanimously, the remitting bill, and the senate held that it would be unjust to

AMERICANS TEACH REVERENCE TO THE FRENCH

By FRANK H. BROOKS.

WHAT is this? Americans interesting themselves in a proposition to have the remains of Josephine, empress to her death, although no longer the wife of the man who divorced her, removed from their resting place in the chapel of Rueil to Malmaison?

Yes, this is the report. J. Pierpont Morgan is said to be one of the Americans interested in the plan. There are others who have signified their wish to Mr. Morgan to participate in the movement with him. It was suggested to ex-Empress Eugenie, and the story is that she heartily endorsed the plan and offered to contribute to the fund.

American tourists in France see two places if no more Paris and Malmaison. Automobiles crowd the old highway paved with Belgian blocks that leads to the place selected by Josephine as her country place when Napoleon, returning from his first triumph in Italy, asked her where she wished to live. She replied, "Malmaison, close to Croissy."

A real estate dicker was the result. Napoleon refused to pay what was asked. The price named was $60,000. The Corsican general offered $50,000. It was refused. The deal was off. Napoleon went on that expedition to Egypt. While he was there Josephine got in option on the place for the sum Napoleon had offered. Thirty thousand cash and $20,000 on mortgage—this was the option. Then she waited for her husband's return.

France offered him St. Cloud or Fontainebleau. Josephine said Malmaison. And Napoleon answered her government: "Malmaison is my own place." And there the happiest days, succeeded by the bitterest, of Napoleon were passed.

On the days before the Revolution a young mother took her two children for an airing to a great tree in the grounds of Malmaison. While she read beneath the shade of the tree her children romped about her. The mother was Mme. Josephine Beauharnais. She was separated from her husband; and she left him because he was a graceless flirt. The children of this play-day were Eugene and Hortense. The memorial at Rueil was placed there by Eugene and Hortense. It was after Hortense had lost her crown, for she had been a queen.

Let us return to the proposition to remove the body of Josephine to the spot she selected for her honeymoon days.

There is a story in connection with the origin of the suggestion. An American touring party visited the chapel at Rueil to lay flowers on the tomb of the woman whose frivolities in life had been forgotten in the pitiful days that afterward befell her after she ceased to be the star of the man who reached the highest place in the story of real and rulers. Mass was being celebrated when the American party entered the little church. A class of boys from the parish school had been led in by their professor. They occupied front benches. The American party had their floral offerings ready to place. There was no room. The top of the pedestal on which the kneeling statue of the empress was covered with hats and caps of the boys, who had thrown the ribbons hastily on the tomb when they entered the church. The Americans had to wait until after services for they could carry out the object of their visit. They witnessed the scramble of the boys for their beads after mass. The Americans were shocked. One of the women of the party said it was a shame.

WHY in the world was Josephine buried here? asked the woman who had expressed her indignation at the disorderly exit. "Why didn't they bury her where she died—the place she selected for her home when she was happiest?"

The sentiment of the inquiry was echoed by the rest of the party. That was a year ago. That American lady's question started the proposition to have the remains of Josephine removed. Mr. Morgan was in attendance at the time. The story reached him. So much of the American motor car party that rode out of Paris went to Rueil in June, 1911.

They proceeded to Malmaison, of course. They went to an old chapel. It is within the shadow of a tree planted by Josephine the day she pleaded with Napoleon to save the life of the Duc d'Angoulême; the day she denied her request, and she became hysterical because he told her she must not interfere with his son.

The unpretentious chapel was built by Queen Maria-Cristina of Spain after she had purchased Malmaison in 1842. She sold it in 1861. The walls and the stained glass windows alone remain. There is no altar, not a place for a choir.

"Why not make this the shrine of Josephine?" asked the American woman who had asked questions at Rueil.

Malmaison is now the property of France. It was chased by the present republic. Would not the republic favor making the remains of the chapel the shelter of a shrine for Josephine, so that that never-ending thing that pays homage to her memory might wander about the dreamy old house and about the grounds where she realized her first dream and mourned over the last days, where she died one day after she had been driving in the shaded avenues with the Tsar of Russia, who at one time was fascinated by the genius Napoleon? And after such a little journey to her tomb in the same hour? All this was discussed by the American motorists a year ago.

EANWHILE another story of Malmaison. A story that was told to me in a way never to be forgotten. The report of the proposed removal of the remains of Josephine prompts this story, that was appropriately termed by the reporter, "The most dramatic hour in history." You shall decide when you have

A good friend—a Frenchman—sent me a note, and I like to go with him to meet a "big" country of his who had just come up out of the revolution in Mexico which led to the relinquishment of the rule of the empire. Frenchman had been loyal to old Diaz. He had a story to tell—he was a living receptacle of memories of strange events, and he was of a family

Americans the world's iconoclasts, the merchant-souled are to teach the French the finished, civilized, artistic French—their lost art of veneration for their dead! This little irony, unstudied, accidental, born of American generosity and American reverence yea, reverence—for historic names and places, has as its purpose the restoration of the bones of Josephine, Empress of the French, to their rightful resting place in her beloved Malmaison. A story of Malmaison now told for the first time adds to a chapter in history and gives a new Napoleon story to the world.

I shall try to give an account of that night spent in the Cafe Boulevard that is one of the few remaining places of the great metropolis of this country about which now and then any one who visits the place may inhale a bit of our only real Bohemia.

THE returning Frenchman whom I met is the great grandson of the man who caused the overthrown emperor to take his foot out of the stirrup in 1815 for the last time in the empire he had created. Some of what was told is history, already written, but the picture is by one who had the outlines and color only three removes from the one who had his part in the Napoleonic drama.

He was introduced as M. Pellitier. In France he is known as De Flahault. Under his assumed name he was in the service of the Diaz government. When he went to Mexico he was a royalist. He had gone there with some sort of commission to Carlotta. He had accompanied her down to the sea when she turned back to France and from thence to the Vatican to beg for her unhappy emperor, whom she had left behind. The night I listened to this fine old character of fascinating personality, as fluent as a lover and with marvelous memory, was the one before he sailed for Havre.

Three glasses half filled with Burgundy were shoved to one side as the soldier of three wars spread a big sheet of paper before him and illustrated his recital with rough tracings. Ashes from his cigarette dropped inside the circle marked "Paris." A splash of wine stained the spot marked "Malmaison," far in the distance the latter place the story teller had nestled his glass. His hair and mustache and imperial were white as carded wool and his face was like a doll finish of bronze. He had been telling of the Hundred Days—after Elba—of Paris, Waterloo, Malmaison and St. Helena. His kinsman, Auguste Charles Flahault, who was made a lieutenant at Marengo and whose last fight was at Waterloo, had pleaded for his master for the last time as the hurrying columns of old Blucher crowded the roads leading from Waterloo to Paris. The man to whom this plea was made had been hoisted from the line to the rank of duke. As Flahault was the last to ask for a concession for Napoleon he was the first to tell the fallen emperor that all was over.

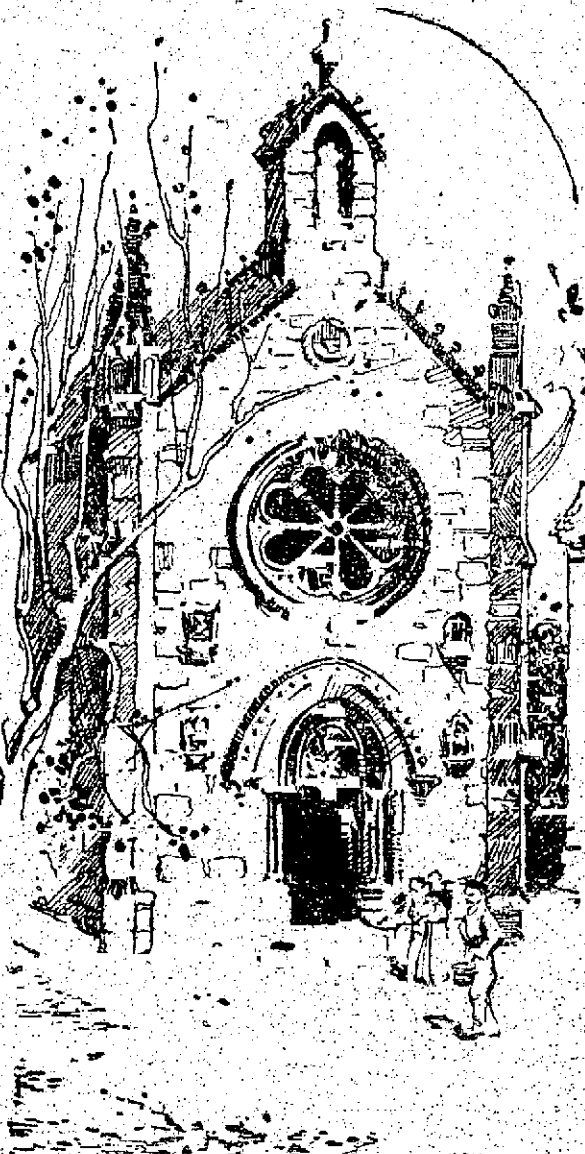

"Out, je parle," said the old hero as he rolled a fresh smoke of the last act—the last minute—of the empire.

Knowing that I was not skilled in his native tongue he confined his remarks to mine as well as he was able, except when he was very animated, and then he spoke only such French as he thought I understood. And when he was not certain he asked my friend to interpret.

PPOINTING to the wine-splashed spot on his paper he continued: "When I was there last an old chestnut tree was standing. Under the shade of that tree the emperor often sat. There I have sat listening to my grandpère as he told stories of the consul and the emperor. Not far from this spot is a bend in the road, and at that point the emperor stopped and had his last look at the scene in which he had passed so many happy days. Here is the castle. He was here three days following his second abdication. When he reached the castle there awaited him Queen Hortense, Josephine's daughter; Lucien, his brother, and Mme. Mere. Warned by the roar of the guns of the enemy they quit the house the day before Napoleon left it forever.

"Now, couteurons (we shall see). Those are the guns of Blucher at Aubervilliers," pointing out the place he marked. "It was believed that Blucher would not be satisfied until he had captured the deposed emperor, for he had boasted that he would hang him from the gates of the capital. So the few friends of the emperor had destroyed the bridges on the road leading to Malmaison. The provisional government at Paris had lost its head. Its wane moments had been involved with all sorts of intrigue. Helas! for the emperor at Malmaison, Fouché was in Paris.

"And Flahault, the honor and pride of our family, shall we not honor his memory?" He lifted his glass. "He was there in the capital. He was there, mon Dieu, a suppliant before Davout—he who had saved the day at Auerstadt, which gave his title until he became a prince for what he did at Eckmühl—he had become Minister of War during the Hundred Days. And before this creature in your country you would call him something worse—Comte de la Flahault begged that he who had made kings might serve now as a citizen soldier and fight in the ranks to stay the invasion. Jamais! Not even when he knew, as he did, that Grouchy was making forced marches to save. Assured, as he was, by one whom he knew was true, that the country would rise from its prostration and rally to a man once more, to its chief. It was not enough that Davout thought the effort would be useless. He might have stopped at that word. Brute, he was that, he must have defame, and in such an hour. He must traduce, revile the man who had made the ladder from which by the

the maker's will Davout got his first glimpse of the heights to which he ascended from obscurity. Mon Dieu! This is Comte de la Flahault. Flahault. Miserable. And he became a Bourbon. Flahault had his titles restored; became a minister plenipotentiary, and was ambassador to England. In the Second Empire he was Senator and had the grand chancellorship of the Legion of Honor. Out, je parle—what is it you say?—with feeling. Out.

"Helas! The Spanish put it in a gente pone y bleso. In your tongue you would make it shorter. You would say that God interfered. A company of grenadiers and a hundred lancers were in the courtyard of Malmaison. And that victory of immortals, Grougand, Saraty, Bertrand, Mouton-Lavasse, who followed their chief into exile to St. Helena—they were of the heroic little garrison about whom the lancers and the grenadiers gathered in that last hour with that adorable fidelity that has no counterpart except in those who went with the blessed Saviour of men to the cross.

"VOH! You see this line?" marking a stroke on the paper. "It is the St. Germain road. There is a cloud of dust. Listen. It is not thunder—something louder, more terrible. Something that has flesh and blood. It is living. These are the troops from Vendee. They are led by Brayer. Somewhere on the road they had heard a strange story—that the emperor was a prisoner at Malmaison. They did not wait for orders. There are such moments. They reached the walls and scaled them. They clambered over the iron railings. They had their eagles with them. They would have carried them into the castle and laid them at the feet of the emperor, but Bertrand, he who was one of the gilded later, commanded them to halt. A guild of officers passed in and paused at the doors of the library. Bertrand removed his hat and knelt. No answer. Brayer, impatient soul, rapped and spoke. Not a word. Becker was there. He had been spurred in Paris by Fouché. He called. Not a syllable. Sans ceremonie Bertrand opened the door and stood. Before him was the emperor, at a table on which was a map—a chart of Paris, that he knew so well, and all roads leading there to and therefrom. An open book, face down, was on one of his knees.

"Some one spoke, reverently, 'Sire.' He looked up. It was the old salutation. The humblest man in the ranks addressed him so and was always recognized. He had come down to me that he looked up with his countenance. At that moment he heard the shouts of Brayer's troops. He was told that they were ready to follow him if he said but the word. Those about him begged him to say the word. For a moment—how long it must have seemed—he held his hand under his chin. The pulse of those who watched must have stopped keeping time. The shouts in the courtyard ceased. Brayer stopped and quickly returned. "All the dust in the road seemed to have settled on his uniform. He offered his sword and almost vehemently pleaded with the emperor to obey the voice of the army. Becker, who had been ordered by the provisional government to hold the emperor, stepped out and offered his services, even to the death. Sublime scene! I have it from grandpère Flahault. It was next to God! He was not irreverent.

"The emperor turned to Bertrand. He asked, 'Has Flahault succeeded with Davout?'

"It has not been told me what answer Bertrand made, but the emperor at that second was his old self. His indifference disappeared. He ordered his horses, his sword and the uniform of the chasseur. His attendant was adjusting his spurs while the emperor studied the chart on the table. He himself buckled on his sword. He passed to the outer door. All who had been waiting for the supreme moment followed in his steps. He held his hat in his hand and saluted the soldiers in the yard. They acclaimed him as only French soldiers can do. His horse was at the steps. The emperor placed one foot in the stirrup.

THERE was another cloud of dust in the bend of the road. Then a rumble of the wheels of a carriage attracted his attention as thus he stood, ready to mount. The carriage had arrived. Out stepped

Comte Flahault from Paris. With hat in hand he approached the man of all his time—shall I not say of any time? It is told me that no lip could have put on canvas the look on the face of the emperor at that moment. He read his fate in the face of his faithful friend. He dropped the reins from his hand—and removed his foot from the stirrup. "Grougand!"

"The old soldier played a hand over his eyes. When the order had been served, and the hand was removed, there was moisture on the bronzed cheeks. He signed for a second and resumed:

"In my home in Southern France, to which I am returning, where the memory of that greatest of men is an inspiration is a bit of parchment under glass, on which is written 'June 29, 1815, 4:30 P. M.' It was written by my great-grandfather. The first figures represent the time when Flahault approached the emperor in the courtyard of Malmaison. The last represents the time when the emperor started on the road that ends at St. Helena. That half hour is the most dramatic in history."

CURIOSLY, at that moment the orchestra played "La Marseillaise." The splendid old man banded me the paper on which he had made his tracings, drained his glass, smashed it to atoms, arose, bowed and said: "Adieu."

A Dog for Everybody

THE fox terrier is everybody's dog. He is a man's dog, for his unflinching gameness, his sporting instincts and powers, his hardness and his companionableness. A fox terrier and a briar pipe have made many confirmed bachelors.

Ladies love him for his gentlemanly qualities, his cleanliness and his gaiety tempered with docility.

He is a dog, because unless actually on his deathbed he is always ready for a lark, he is ready and is wonderfully sympathetic when his young master is in hot water.

He is a child's dog, because he will "stand" any amount of pulling about, though when old he is apt to be human, to be snappish; but this applies to all dogs.

The fox terrier is, further, everybody's dog in that he is cheap. You can get a puppy with a bit of blood in him for a five-dollar note, while for half that sum, or even less, you can buy one that you need not be ashamed to be seen with in the streets.

There are, of course, two varieties of fox terrier—the smooth-haired and the rough, or wire-haired. But the coat, their points are practically the same, and there is nothing to choose between them as regards pluck, gaiety and other lovable characteristics.

The public prefer the smooth-haired fox terrier, for he is much easier to keep clean and smart looking. Sportsmen, on the other hand, favor the wire-haired variety, for his tough coat protects him from bites, scratches and other injuries, and also prevents his catching cold when he gets wet. But really one is as good as the other.

WITHOUT going into all the show points of the breed, here are some points to bear in mind when buying a fox terrier. Above all things, he must be full of life. A dog may be technically perfect in formation—head, bone, etc.—but unless he looks as if he enjoyed every moment of his existence—as he generally does—unless he moves as if on india rubber springs, and unless his eyes almost "speak" with alert intelligence, they are in no way compared with the dog that bristles with technical faults, but is "alive."

Color is unimportant, but white should predominate; while brindle, liver or red markings are a serious blemish from a show point of view.

Probably the original fox terrier was black and tan, and his ancestry survives in the black-and-tan markings about the head, which are both general and correct.

The head is an essential point of beauty, and a good head will alone for many weaknesses in other directions. It should be long and "clean"—that is, free from loose skin or bunniness. The skull should be flat, and lie in the same plane with the nose, like that of a greyhound. Any depression, or "stop," as it is called, between the skull and nose is a bad defect.

THE eyes should be small, dark, sunken, and, as has been said, full of intelligence.

What dog fanciers call a "Dudley nose"—i. e., a flesh, or partly flesh-colored nose—is a very bad point. The nostrils must also be black. When born a puppy's nostrils are flesh-colored, but black spots appear within a few days, and at the end of a few weeks the nostrils should be like the nose, entirely black.

"Tricks," "tulip" or "rose" ears are bad faults. The ears should be small, thin, V-shaped, and carried forward, close to the cheeks, and not at the side of it, like those of a foxhound.

For the rest, the chest should be deep, but narrow, the back short, the forelegs straight and full of bone, the hindlegs muscular, and the feet small and catlike. Even to the smooth-haired terrier the foot should be close, hard, dense, and abundant, while the under part of the foot should be well covered with hair.

The docked tail, or "stern," should be carried gaily, but never over the back.

The points of a wire-haired terrier are the same, except that he should have a slight beard, while his coat should be like pin-wire.

Perhaps He Bit?

Three months of matrimony hadn't taken the sting off the gingerbread for Mrs. Youngwife. She had been husband very dearly, and didn't mind saying so.

When hubby was good she said he was "like a cake, three layers deep." If he was extra nice she said "chocolate cake, four layers deep," and so on.

One day her mother dropped in to see her. The young bride was silent and grieved, but the wise mother pretended not to notice it.

"And how's George today?" she asked presently.

"Chocolate cake, three layers deep, or four?"

"No," said her daughter curtly.

"Two layers, then?"

"No."

"One layer, then?"

The bride shook her head.

"Then what is he?" asked the mother.

"Dog biscuit," snapped Mrs. Youngwife.

A ROSE

I am the one rich thing that morn Leaves for the ardent noon to win.
Grasp me not, I have a thorn.
But bend and take my fragrance in.

Petal on petal opening wide,
My being into beauty flows.
Hundred-leaved and damask-dyed,
Yet nothing, nothing but a rose.

—Mrs. H. P. Spafford.

SOCIETY events for the week largely centered in the celebration of the Fourth of July and varied widely in accordance with the tastes of the participants. Many went into the mountains or parks bearing generously laden picnic baskets and spent a happy carefree day far from the noise of the fire-crackers so plentiful in the city. Some motored to other cities and joined their friends in various reunions while by far the majority elected to spend the day within their own homes. In the evening, the band, concerts and fireworks attracted large crowds.

Out at the Colorado Springs Golf club the members and their guests had a most delightful day. The flag tournament for men brought out the best players and Mr. W. Kennon Jewett showed some expert sportsmanship and won the first prize by carrying the flag to the nineteenth hole. Mr. Willis R. Armstrong won the second prize, planting his flag after his drive to the nineteenth hole.

The ladies' golf tournament in the afternoon proved exciting and displayed remarkable skill upon the part of the players. Those participating were Mrs. James P. Shearer, Mrs. Harold C. Harmon, Mrs. Russell A. Harland, Mrs. Joseph W. Ward, Mrs. William C. Brown, Mrs. Beverly Tucker, Mrs. John Speed Tucker, Mrs. Joan W. Yates, Mrs. Edward A. Beecher, Mrs. Benjamin F. Lowell and Mrs. Albert G. Hodgkins.

Mrs. Shearer made the finest score and received the trophy, a Sheffield plate. Mrs. Hodgkins was presented with the consolation, a three-minute sand glass, and Mrs. Harland was presented with a golf score for having the most "ones" in going three times around the hole.

Many members of the club and their guests partook of luncheon in the delightful club house and afternoon tea was served at a table on the veranda. Barnes' orchestra was at the club throughout the day and lent the occasion with popular selections.

Shortly after 4 o'clock in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, Mrs. Francis J. Gaudard formally presented to the United States flag to the club and it was accepted on behalf of the members by Admiral J. B. Crable of Washington, D. C. and Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Gaudard's address was as follows: "One June 14, 1776 congress authorized the adoption of a flag to be used by the original colonies. With varying changes it remains, and a large degree, the same as the one we today call our flag. We were a 'decible folk' 133 years ago. Trying a new form of government, with few resources at our command, with an impoverished treasury and with many vexed problems to be solved by those in control of the affairs of the country.

"But the same courage and high sense of duty that sustained the men who fought for liberty and freedom animated those statesmen who, with earnestness of purpose and singleness of heart, put the foundation of our nation. In hours of darkness and gloom, and when the very integrity of the country was at stake, this flag has waved over a land which grew from a day of small things to the world power of today. It has been bled in blood, shattered by shot and shell, it has cheered many a dying soldier, giving his life blood to preserve intact the land which was his birthplace. It has covered the coffins of our heroes and has fought the good fight and who fell in the dim of battle; it has brought tears to the eyes of the inner soldier in far-away places; and has led the armies of the United States true and again to victory.

"As we look at it, we can think of the red, white and blue as typifying the blood it has cost, the spotless purity of true patriotism, and the star of hope that God will be with our destinies, and that our future committed to his hands will be safe.

"But we must do our part in these days of unrest and uncertainty. We need men who will give of their best to preserve inviolate the principles of representative government so clearly outlined by the seers and prophets of the eighteenth century, the best not only of thought and deed, but of time. The reins of government must be held in the hands of patriotic men and not allowed to drop into the grasp of self-seeking demagogues who only care for their own aggrandizement.

"We should place men in positions of trust and power who command the respect as well as the confidence of their fellow citizens; those who know the true history of the motives of those who framed the constitution which now and forever must be the bulwark of our liberties, and through adherence to which, we only can maintain our unity and our proud place among the nations of the earth.

"This flag is a call to duty, a duty to impress upon the youth, by our example, reverence and respect for the colors. Too often does it fall to be so recognized as it passes. We cannot afford to be so negligent in such a sense of reverence that instantly every head will be uncovered as the colors pass. The many-sided womanhood of this charming club would make the effort widespread.

"I now have the honor to present to the Colorado Springs Golf club this beautiful flag. As the stars and stripes wave continually over this building, may the sense of patriotism be kindled afresh each day; and out in this far western country, which to so many of us is a new home, under the glorious blue of the Colorado sky, in the beauty of the plains, may a deeper realization of what we owe to its protection fill our hearts with joy as we feel that we are citizens of no mean country.

"Flag of the free hearts' hope and home!
Thy stars have lit the walk of mine.
And all thy hues were born in heaven.

"Forever float that standard shaft!
Where breathes the free but falls before us.
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us."

In a few well chosen sentences, Mrs. Shearer, as chairman of the committee of ladies making the gift, presented a club member. This was graciously accepted by the president of the club, Mr. Edward J. Ulrich, who characterized the colors, "the blue of the sky and the white of the mountains" as most appropriate ones.

Both flag and pennant were duly raised upon the flagstaff by little Gladys Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ferguson Burns. During the exercises, all joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and "America" with great patriotic fervor.

Cheyenne Mountain Club.

The Fourth of July, members of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club gathered at the pleasant club house and informal sports field were indulged in. Many gathered around the luncheon table and at evening the place was gay with pleasures of the evening. There was a well attended dinner and a large party of guests. Barnes' orchestra and during the intermissions there was quite an elaborate pyrotechnic display.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. MacNeill entertained at dinner at the club in compliment to Mrs. MacNeill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence S. Parsons of New York city, covers being laid for 12. In honor of her house guest, Miss May Rowell of Port Logan, Mrs. Frederick H. Morey gave a dinner party of eight covers. There were also other smaller parties dining at the club.

The Fourth at the Casino.

The evening of the Fourth was a gay one at Broadmoor casino and a large crowd enjoyed the concert program, preceding the dance, played by the Casino orchestra. The dinner, "dined at fresco" upon the veranda. Among those occupying tables were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hunter Selvidge and a party of six; Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Kiesel and a party of six; Major and Mrs. Charles T. Lowndes and party; Mr. and Mrs. Bart S. Kaufman and party; Mr. Gerald F. Seligman and party; Mr. and Mrs. Emerson L. Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Grimwood, Mrs. O. K. Johnson, Miss Louise Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Schlotter, Mr. Whitcomb, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Franklin, Dr. Edward R. Nepper, Mr. John Nichols, Mr. Norman Waulissa, Mr. Earl Cox, Mr. Harry Goldstein, Mr. L. C. Levy and others.

Benefit for St. Francis.

At the request of several of Colorado Springs philanthropically inclined society ladies, Mr. James Hawley has consented to give a special matinee for the benefit of St. Francis hospital, Thursday afternoon, July 11, in the Opera house. The magnificent charity work of the hospital sisters is well known and the appreciation of the doctors and the Elks was shown by the baseball match played for their benefit, June 14.

Mr. Hawley will present the interesting play, "The Hair in the Soup" and confidently expects to surmount the obstacles with a substantial amount to meet the many demands upon the depleted treasury.

The following ladies were present recently at a large reception held at St. Francis and are strong supporters and patronesses of the hospital: Mrs. Deane Chisholm, Mrs. Edwin W. Giddings, Mrs. Frank G. Peck, Miss Jane Burns, Miss Kate Burns, Mrs. William A. Campbell, Mrs. Homer C. Moses, Mrs. McCaffrey, Mrs. P. E. Gildea, Mrs. Ryan, Mrs. Hays, Mrs. A. J. Hunt, Mrs. James F. Burns, Mrs. H. A. Peters, Mrs. K. Reed, Mrs. Pliny H. Perkins, Mrs. Beverly Tucker, Mrs. Zenah H. McClanahan, Mrs. J. H. Brown, Mrs. M. E. Perkins, Mrs. Alonzo L. Fitts, Mrs. Francis R. Rothrock, Miss Marie Zimmerman and others.

Artist Concerts

With its usual commendable enterprise, the Colorado Springs Musical club has completed arrangements for the season's series of artist concerts which are a distinctive feature in the social and musical life of this city. During its remarkably prosperous career, this organization has proven of great educational value and accomplished a work that will ever be gratefully recalled. In all probability, the concert will be given in the Opera house, but this will be decided later.

The methods of handling the course reservations have been revised and this season all will move on smoothly. The course will open October 15 with Alma Gluck, soprano, from the Metropolitan Opera house, and Schraeder, cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Schraeder has appeared here with the famous Kneisel quartet a number of times and his return will give great pleasure.

The great soprano, Madame Sembrich, has been secured for a date in February, and Louis Persinger of this city, whose remarkable violin playing has won him first place with European audiences, will appear in the series at a date not conflicting with his other American engagements. Ernest Schellinx, the much heralded pianist, will be the fourth in this season's unrivaled offerings.

Also, arrangements have been completed for the return of Mischa Elman, the violin artist, who will appear here under the auspices of the musical club some time in March outside of the regular course. He instantly found favor locally, and it is a matter for congratulation that he is to come again.

Members of the club are elated over the news that Reinold Werrenrath, the fine baritone, who sang here in a recital last winter, will arrive in Colorado Springs July 20 for a month's stay, accompanied by Mrs. Werrenrath and baby. They are to be the guests of Mrs. Werrenrath's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans C. Petersen, 613 North Wahsatch avenue. It is anticipated that Mr. Werrenrath may consent to sing while here, as many were denied the privilege of hearing him that zero night when he sang so brilliantly, although just off from a snowbound train 82 hours behind time.

Beautiful Church Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Mary Morrow Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sidney Tucker to Mr. Marion Rice Kirkwood, son of the late Ray and Mrs. Thomas L. Kirkwood, all of this city, was beautifully celebrated Tuesday evening in the First Congregational church, the pastor, the Rev. William Watson Ranney, officiating.

The altar and organ loft had been skillfully transformed into a realistic sylvan bower by the profuse use of boughs of oak leaves and willow flowers in which festoons and noisettes of pink and blue tulle were deftly intermingled.

About 7 o'clock a choice musical program began which was greatly appreciated by the several hundred friends present. The program was given by Miss Jean Laing, the gifted young pianist, played a double number, "Serenade" by Brahms and DeKoven's "Everlovely love song." "O Promise Me," Mrs. Edward E. Tallaferra sang. D'Harcourt's exquisite song, "Because," and at the entrance of the bride procession, the bride chorus from "Lohengrin" was effectively rendered by Miss Jennie Pinckney, Mrs. Tallaferra and Miss Katherine Thomas, accompanied by Miss Laing and Mr. and Mrs. Jackson.

The bride and groom were accompanied by the bride's father, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McConnell of Norma, Okla., Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Bennett of Muskogee, Mich. Then came the ring bearers, Robert Tucker, brother of the bride, and Arthur Kirkwood, nephew of the bridegroom; the flower girls, members of the bride's Sunday school class, Miss Wynona, Rindquist, Miss Marie Lundquist, Miss Margaret, Norton, Miss Eleanor Bartlett, Miss Maude Allen and Miss Harriet Ayler; next, the bridesmaid, Miss Helen Kirkwood; and the maid of honor, the bride's sister, Miss Margaret Vestal, Tucker. The bride entered last, escorted by her father, who gave her away in marriage. The bridegroom awaited at the altar with his best man, Mr. Samuel W. Kittelman.

The bride's gown of ivory crepe meteor was garnished with rare pearls and lace. The bride's veil was of tulle and caught in the coiffure with bride's roses; sprays of lily of the valley and maiden hair ferns. The shower bouquet was composed of bride's roses, swansons, lilies of the valley and maiden hair ferns.

Mrs. Tucker's gown was of blue marquisette over blue silk and she carried pink orchids and forget-me-nots. Miss Kirkwood's gown was of white net over pink silk, finished with a pink sash and she carried pink sweet peas. The flower girls wore all in white, lingerie gowns, trimmed with embroidery and lace and their baskets were filled with summer flowers. They presented each guest with a wedding box, containing a piece of the wedding fruit cake as they were passing out of the church.

The bride party and immediate relatives repaired to the Tucker residence, 1515 North Nevada avenue, where congratulations were tendered to the young couple and refreshments were served. Later Mr. Kirkwood and bride left for the coast.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood are graduates of the Colorado Springs High school. Mrs. Kirkwood attended Colorado college for two years and then went to Wellesley college where she was graduated in 1909. Mr. Kirkwood was graduated at Stanford university and had a postgraduate course in law at Harvard. Last year he was one of the law faculty at the Oklahoma State university. This fall, Mr. Kirkwood will occupy a chair in the law faculty of Stanford university and he and his bride intend locating in their future home at Palo Alto this summer. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood have hosts of friends whose best wishes will attend them in their new life.

The handle of the basket was ornamented with a large bow of pink tulle and a fluffy rosette of the tulle was suspended from the electrolite. The colonial glass candlesticks held pink candles with pink shades. The name cards were hand decorated and those for the guests of honor were particularly appropriate.

The guests were Miss Tucker, Mr. Kirkwood, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Sidney Tucker, Miss Margaret Vestal, Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Willis L. Kirkwood, Miss Helen Kirkwood, Miss Ramona Brady, Mr. Samuel W. Kittelman, Mr. Donald F. Tucker and Mr. Joseph McConnell of Norma, Okla.

Oh! heart of mine, we shouldn't be so sad!
What we've missed of calm, we could have had.
What we've missed of calm, we could have had.
What we've missed of calm, we could have had.

We have erred in that dark hour
When the tears fell with the shadow
When the tears fell with the shadow
When the tears fell with the shadow.

Let us not shine and shadow
Let us not shine and shadow
Let us not shine and shadow
Let us not shine and shadow.

A VOW

I may never journey far,
I may never climb to fame,
I may never own a motor car,
I may never have a name.

I may never have a care
For my portion of the day,
I may get the worst of it
In my toiling, but I vow
I shall touch and sing a bit
And won't whimper, anyhow.

I may always have to bear
Heavy burdens on my way,
I may always have a care
For my portion of the day,
I may get the worst of it
In my toiling, but I vow
I shall touch and sing a bit
And won't whimper, anyhow.

PINCH HITTING BY JOSEPH BERT TINKER

WHEN Joseph Bert Tinker, star short stop of the Chicago Cubs, first made his debut in big league company, back in 1901, it was primarily due to the fact that he had gained a reputation as a player who was nearly always good for a safe hit at a game's critical point. He could be depended on to smash out a hard drive in the hour of his team's most urgent need, and this faculty he has retained ever since. Wherever baseball is played Tinker is known as one of the ablest pinch hitters that ever wielded a willow.

The fans are always on tip-toe with anticipation when they see his stocky figure ambling toward the plate, especially when there's a man or two on bases and Chicago needs a run to tie the score. And it's seldom that Tinker disappoints.

I found that Tinker himself was prone to disclaim any unusual ability as a batsman who could be depended on to pull his team out of a tight hole when I talked with him during the recent series between the Cubs and McGraw's Giants on the New York Polo Grounds. Tinker prefers to play the game to talking for publicity, and when I asked him to reveal the secrets of pinch hitting he laughed.

"Why, there's nothing to it," he declared. "It's all a matter of chance and luck. Besides, a man who may be a crackerjack pinch hitter against one team is just as likely to be absolutely worthless against another."

"It all depends on whether he is feeling fit that particular day, or whether the pitcher isn't. Then, again, the element of luck plays a big part. A ball that he'd miss by a mile on one occasion may fit right into his bat on another. And that's the way it goes."

"For instance," said the player, as he warmed up to his subject, "in New York I am looked upon as little bit at that time Chicago might have been the champions for that year. Of course that one game wouldn't have done it, but it would have given us a chance to play another game, and as baseball is a game of chance, Chicago might have won the series."

"Now Archer, one of the best pinch hitters in the league, feels just as badly about this incident as I do, for he followed me to bat and Combs turned the same trick on him. That just shows you how much luck and chance play a part in baseball. The chances seemed to be all in favor of at least one hit coming with Archer and myself at bat, but you see both luck and chance seemed to be playing with Philadelphia on this occasion, and as a result they won."

"Devore was never able to touch up Three-Finger Brown very hard, and most every one thought that after Brown 'beamed' him in Chicago Devore would be still worse off when he faced the three-fingered wonder again. Still, in the very next series played at the Polo Grounds Devore got five hits off Brown. One of them was what the fans generally term a 'pinch hit.' So you will see that almost any player, at some time or another, is bound to get a hit at the psychological moment."

"No doubt the situation at the time the player goes to bat has a lot to do with his feelings, regardless of the instruction he may receive when he leaves the bench. When I face a pitcher and we have a good lead I often try to place the ball in some certain spot, whereas if we have men on bases and a hit means a run I simply do the best I can to get out."

"There are any number of big leaguers who can put the ball just where they please. Not every time, of course, but I've seen it demonstrated enough times to know that such men as Doyle of the Giants, Wagner of the Pittsburghs, Zimmerman of our team and a score

In the gentle art of slamming out a safe one, bringing in a needed run at a game's critical point, no Big Leaguer excels Joseph Bert Tinker, the star short-stop of the Chicago Cubs. Using W. E. Whiston as his quill-wielder he gives some interesting sidelights on this angle of the national sport.

they do now. For instance, I remember when I was sold from one team to another for $3. It was back in Kansas City in 1896. I was playing third base for the John Taylors. I only weighed 137 pounds in those days and long drives were few and far between. I guess my fielding and throwing helped my job with this team for two years, and then the manager sold me to Hagen's Tailors for the $3. I stayed with them a year and then started out with the J. E. Schmeltzer team, representing a sporting goods house in Kansas City.

Johnny Kling, who afterward became a catcher in the big league, and who has often been termed the peer of all catchers, was also with this team. About the middle of the season Claude East—to whom, by the way, I owe my 'chance' for making the big league—picked up a team to represent Parsons, Kan., a town which is really on the map. We played on the co-operative plan, share-and-share alike. The usual division was about $1.25 for each new-for game."

"If it rained on Saturday and Sunday most of us would have to go hungry during the week. One day we got a game with a team located in a town about twenty miles from Parsons. We wired the manager that he would have to send $11 to defray traveling expenses. He wired it all right. And when the bunch saw that bankroll, which in those days looked pretty large, they decided that we would beat it on a freight train and split the $11."

"About ten miles out a brakeman put us off, and then and there the Parsons co-operative team disbanded for life. I went to Coffeyville, Kan., where Johnson, who is now pitching such a star game for the Senators, was holding down the mound. I was made captain and in a series of three games against the Kansas City Block of the American Association I made seven hits."

"At the close of the season I was recommended to George Tobolsky, who had the Denver team, joining them in the Spring of 1900. I had always played third base, and Tobolsky put me on second. The result was that I was released."

"John McEvelley, former manager of the St. Louis Nationals, was then holding down the same position with the Great Falls Mont. team. He signed me up, but in five weeks traded me to Helena. Out there they have split seasons. The team winning the championship of the first half plays the victor of the second half. Helena and Great Falls were the winning teams, and the papers out in that section were kind enough to say that it was my hitting which won the championship in each instance."

"WHEN I struck Great Falls, by the way, I had one lone dollar. A shave, a haircut and a meal landed me at the hotel grounds broke. I was lucky enough to drive out a home run which won the game. Up to this time Great Falls had lost nine straight. The crowd was so enthusiastic over this victory that some one immediately took up a collection which netted me $8.50."

"John Griffin of the Portland Pacific Northwest League signed me up. My work as third for that team attracted the attention of the scouts for the Cubs and in the Fall of 1904 I signed with Chicago. Frank G. Seely, who was handling the Chicago team at that time, decided that he couldn't use me at third, and to him I owe my chance at shortstop, in which position my friends have been pleased to say that I have done fairly well."

"During the past three winters I have been playing in vaudeville, and while I feel pretty much at home on the stage now, I had an awful time at first getting used to the footlights. When I first went into the show business I started with another ball player. We had intended doing a banjo act. We went to a little town just out of Chicago to smooth out the act before opening in the city."

"The owner, manager, stage manager, ticket taker and seller was as fine a specimen of a rube as one would wish to meet. During the afternoon performance my partner, who was a rather small fellow, caught his foot in the rung of his chair and landed on his head in the orchestra pit."

"Luckily he wasn't badly hurt, and after the evening performance, which went off smoothly, the manager came to us and, in a voice that was meant to be harsh, said: 'Don't you fellows know the rules and regulations of this house? I told him that I thought we did. Then, said he, what do you two mean by cutting your act? I've a good mind to fine you each five dollars.'"

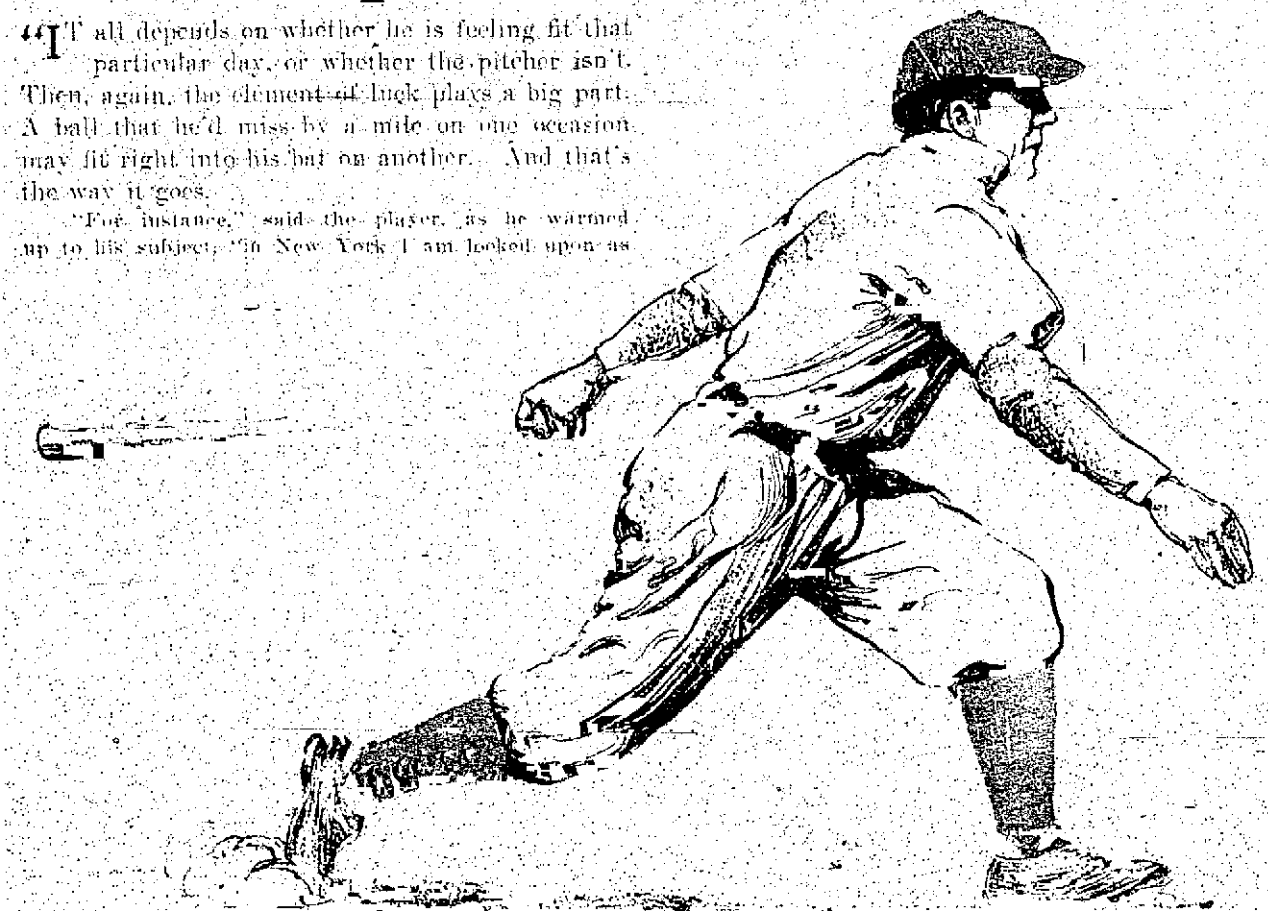

"Not wishing to lose two dollars more than we were getting I tried to smooth things over, and asked him where we had cut. 'Why, that tumbling your partner done is the best part of your act, and you oughter had more of it.'"

"I know I won't be able to play ball all my life, so I have taken up the automobile game as a side line. Now when the day comes that it's a case of quit the game or go back to the bushes, I can command a pretty fair salary selling for wagons."

"How about your two boys? Will you make ball players out of them?" asked Claude Zimmerman, who happened along just then."

"That's up to them. I'll give them a good education and they can do as they please. I wouldn't be surprised, though, if they followed in the old man's footsteps," replied Tinker.

Then the bell sounded for the game and Mr. Joseph Bert Tinker trotted off to his place on the diamond.

a pretty fair sort of a pinch hitter. Well, there are other teams in the league who don't worry about me at all. They seem to think I am helpless in case of an emergency. They would rather have me up at the bat with three men on bases and two out than any three-year-old enthusiast you ever saw."

"Now this very same thing may be said of any player in any league who has the reputation of being a pinch hitter. There is our old friend, Hons Wagner, of the Pirates. Two good Chicago pitchers pass a hitter like Fred Clarke, with Wagner next up because they figured that Clarke was better in a pinch than Wagner. Of course this doesn't always figure out to be the case, for after Clarke has been passed by Chicago Wagner has been known to knock out a single and even a double. But it simply goes to show that, while nearly every other team in the league would dodge Wagner on account of his reputation as a pinch hitter, Chicago would rather have him than Clarke, who, while an excellent player, doesn't appeal to the average fan as so much of a foe as Wagner would be."

"A man doesn't have to be a fan or an expert to know that no player can be expected to hit a ball every time he comes to bat. He has to do it well, probably wouldn't be as interesting a sport as it is now. Everybody has his own opinion as to who he thinks is the best pinch hitter. For myself, I consider Fred Clarke the most dangerous man in a pinch. Larry Doyle, too, of the New Yorks, is considered a hard proposition for a pitcher in a pinch. Roger Bresnahan of St. Louis is another who most any pitcher in the league hates to see at the plate when a hit is needed."

"I might go on and mention thirty or forty players who, against different teams and different pitchers, are at pinch men. While on the other hand these same players, when pitted against a different team and a different pitcher, are considered nothing out of the ordinary."

"PERHAPS the worst fall down in my career as a pinch hitter, or at least the one that I always remember with a deep feeling of chagrin—occurred two years ago, in the world's series with Philadelphia at Chicago. It proved to be the last game. With three men on bases and no outs, Combs struck me out. I don't believe I will ever get over that incident, for it will always make me think that if I had got a single or others can hit the ball to pretty nearly any part of the diamond they choose."

"TALKING from his record and what I have seen of his pitching in tight places I should say that Big Ed Walsh of the White Sox is the hardest man in the business for a pinch hitter to be successful against. His record shows that he has more men left on bases than any other big league pitcher in the game. There seems to be no limit to his ability when the bases are full and the number of runs scored after he has filled the three corners are proportionately few."

"Fans all over the country remember the New York Chicago series of 1908, just before the world's series. At the last game of that series something happened which will always be a source of jubilation to me, because I started the batting rally in the fourth inning which made us win the game and the series. Matty was pitching for New York, and I, the first man up, drove out a three-base hit. By the time the necessary three outs were made we had rung the bell four times."

"But while there is a lot of work on the diamond, there is also a lot of fun. I remember one instance where Big Chief McGraw of New York caught the umpire on third base. The umpire, not knowing what I did back onto third while the Chief, mistaking Devore for me, touched him. After the game I overheard McGraw say:

"Chief, if you ever display any baseball brains on the field I'll buy you a box of cigars."

"And the Chief, with the most serious expression that one could imagine, replied:

"I don't smoke."

"On another occasion White was pitching for the Giants. The first time up I got a three-bagger which landed right over in St. Seymour's territory. The next one counted for two bags, and the third, a home run, made St. Seymour nearly out to the fence. When we were changing positions St. said:

"If you played against New York all the time you probably would be batting 1000. How is it you manage to hit so well against us and yet you're not such a much when it comes to playing against other teams?"

"Well, I'll tell you, St. I replied. 'All the other center fielders have been catching those balls you have been letting get away for home runs and three-baggers.'"

"DURING the early part of my career as a ball player things didn't run along as smoothly as

By ANATOLE FRANCE.

THEOANG-TSEN, who was of the country of Siam, was a man whose wisdom had taught him detachment from all things of this world, and being a good Chinaman he did not believe in things eternal. Heed for him the only possible road to content was to escape from those aims which all men are bound to admit while in breathless pursuit of useless wealth and vain honors.

Now it must have been to pass that this sage found great satisfaction in following out his own theory, for after his death he was honored as one of the great and thought worthy of envy. During these days which he passed upon this earth and which geniuses who have been misunderstood believed he lived in some unknown world, with a green sky, amidst flowering shrubs and willows and tall bamboos, he was accustomed to walk alone and dream of countries where he lived without knowing why not now."

Now it is so decreed that one day before he was to be buried along the flowery slopes of the mountain called Napi-Hua, and he came to a cemetery, where, according to the usage of the country, the dead sleep under little mounds of earth. When he saw these tombs which extended as far as the eye could reach, the philosopher began to meditate upon the transience of man."

"Alas!" he said, "there is the crossroads where all paths terminate. When one has once taken his place among the dead he never returns."

It must be admitted that this idea was not very original, but, nevertheless, it struck upon the philosophy of Theoang-Tsen, and that of the Chinese in general. These people know but one life, and that is the one in which you can look upon the sun shining upon the pomegranates. The equality of all mortals after death consoles them or drives them to desperation, according to whether they are by temperament disposed to be serene or inclined to melancholia. Besides, in this life, they have a lot of little red and green wads to amuse them, who sometimes resurrect the dead and play other amusing tricks. But Theoang-Tsen, who belonged to the proud class of philosophers, never bent the knee to these porcelain dragons."

As he wandered about among the tombs, lost in thought, he met a young woman, who was clothed in mourning, that is to say, she had on a long, white, seamless dress of coarse cotton. Seated by a grave, she moved her fan to and fro over the recently returned earth."

Curious to know what was her motive in this fainting at a newly made grave, Theoang-Tsen bowed low and courteously to the young lady and said: "Might I ask, madame, who the person is who lies within this tomb, and why you take so much trouble to fan the earth which has been heaped upon him? I am a philosopher. I am always looking for cause and effect, and I cannot understand the reason for your strange griefs."

The young woman continued to move her fan to and fro. She blushed, bowed her head and murmured some words which the sage could not hear. He asked the question several times, but could get no answer. The young woman seemed to pay no attention to him, and it was as if all the strength of her soul were concentrated in the hand which was moving the fan slowly but incessantly to and fro.

THEOANG-TSEN withdrew regretfully. While he knew that all is vanity in this world, his philosophic mind inclined him to seek out the reasons for those of women; for this class of humanity inspired him with a deep, malevolent curiosity. He walked slowly away, turning back now and then in spite of himself to watch that fan, which under a simple veil concealed the wing of a huge butterfly."

Suddenly there appeared before him an old woman whose presence he had not hitherto remarked, and she made sign to him to follow her. He did so, and when they came within the shade of a tomb that was higher than the others, she said to him:

"I heard you ask my mistress a question which she did not answer. But I will satisfy your curiosity, because I am naturally obliging, and also in the hope that you will give me enough money to buy from the priest a magic paper which will prolong my life."

Theoang-Tsen took from his purse a coin and handed it to the old woman and thereupon she spoke as follows:

"This lady whom you saw by the tomb is Lady Lu, widow of a writer who was called Tao, and who died some fifteen days ago, after a long illness, and was buried there. They loved each other very tenderly. Although knowing that death was upon him, Tao could not be content to leave her. And the thought that he must forsake her in the very flower of her youth and beauty was insupportable to him."

"He resigned himself, however, to the inevitable, for he was a man of very loving character, and well he knew that he must bow to the decree of fate. Weeping at the bedside of Tao, whom she had not left a moment during his illness, Lady Lu called the gods to witness that she would not survive him; that she would suicide his coffin, as she had shared his bed."

"BUT Tao said to her: 'My lady, do not swear that.' At least, she sobbed, if I must survive you, if I am condemned by the evil spirits to continue to see the light of day after your eyes have closed to it, know that I will never consent to become the wife of another, and that I will have but one husband as I have but one soul."

"But Tao said to her: 'My lady, do not swear that.' 'Oh, my lord Tao, my lord Tao! Permit me at least to swear that I will live at least five years before I marry another.'

"But Tao said to her: 'My lady, do not swear that.' Swear that you will be faithful to my memory as long as the earth upon my tomb has not dried."

Thereupon Lady Lu swore a solemn oath, and the good Tao closed his eyes forever."

The sorrow of the widow was beyond words to describe. Her eyes were reddened by tears. She scratched her pink and white cheeks with her sharp little nails. But everything passes away. Her torrent of tears grew smaller and smaller."

FIFTEEN days after the death of Lord Tao she began to take notice. She heard that a young disciple of her husband desired to tell her how much he sympathized with her. In common decency she could not refuse to receive him."

"She sighed deeply as he came in. This young man was very fashionably dressed and was likewise very good looking. He spoke very little about the late Lord Tao and very much about the lady herself; he confessed that he loved her, and she did not seem to object very much. In the meantime, she passes whole days seated by the tomb of her husband, trying to dry up the earth with her fan."

When the old woman had finished her story the wise Theoang-Tsen meditated profoundly: "Youth is short; the price of desire gives wings to young men and young women. After all, it must be acknowledged that Lady Lu is an honest woman, who will not break her word."

And it would be a very good example for some of our European women to follow."

First Deaf Mute—He wasn't so very angry, was he?

Second Deaf Mute—He was so wild that the words he used almost blistered his fingers."

An Argument for Government Ore Testing Plants

Carney Hartley in Mining Science

Your recent editorial on this subject, in which you invite discussion through your columns, opens the way to an expression of opinion which, in making the ultimate decision in the matter, should be valuable data for reference as largely coming from the state most vitally interested. There are apparently two sides to this question, depending upon one's point of view, though really, when it is sifted down to the last bit of oversize there is actually but one side and that with many excellent reasons favoring government aid and cooperation in this matter.

Basically, we live under a system of laws which are founded upon the rule of the greatest good for the greatest number. This is perhaps not good corporation law, but our best and most patriotic citizens subscribe to its fairness. Consequently, in the consideration of a proposition of this kind we must bear this rule in mind. One of the arguments against government assistance in solving the metallurgical problem is that it would be competing with privately owned plants already established in the work. From a sound business standpoint this is a very shortsighted view. The most growing need of the west, following the rapid growth of agriculture, is a larger population of the ultimate consumer creating a closer and larger market for farm products a better field for manufacturers and a general stimulus to business in all lines. It is agreed by the majority of people familiar with conditions that the metallurgical industry is the foundation upon which this structure must be built.

From the economic standpoint, the socialistic idea of employment for all is the ideal one. Charity is so much in use in the general economy of the nation. Low average wages with the resultant curtailment of business is likewise a loss.

The creator put the metals in the rocks for the use of man, intending that he should win them by the sweat of his brow. And rightfully, it is said that the money acquired by this effort is absolutely and primarily clean and free from any suggestion of being obtained at another's expense.

In the face of the expenditures found necessary in some recently successful cases it is obviously impossible for the average mine owner to carry out the work of solving his own problem of close economy. We are told that it cost the Portland company at Cripple Creek $75,000 to find out how to handle its mine dumps at a profit and another company spent $25,000 in experimenting to find a method of recovering the zinc from the tailings of the mills at Park City, Utah.

The majority of people who think of the results of large combinations of capital. Not so much because of any primary objection to the thing itself, but rather on account of the conditions which have almost invariably obtained. These, however, naturally follow the system of financing and operating, and must be duly taken into account on the score. On the other hand, and speaking generally, under intelligent management, investment and economy are in direct proportion. The greater the investment the greater the economy and this is particularly true where machinery replaces hand labor and refinement of the mechanical equipment makes possible a higher economy.

When mining was brought down to the necessity of giving careful attention to the economies of operation and to the recovery of a higher percentage of the values in order that a reasonable profit might be returned the need for larger capital was more apparent. Individual effort could no longer make a success and the metallurgical problems had to be met before any very great progress could be made toward rehabilitating the industry. Further development showed this to be so complex often the ore from adjoining mines being different from the metallurgical standpoint as to make it beyond the means and ability of the majority to make any progress. Now, what were the actual visible results of all of this? That no reader of this article who has been in the mining regions but knows of at least one mine idle, and in many cases abandoned, for want of a proper method of treatment for ores of good value. One-time thriving mining towns all over the country were reduced to a state wherein a few people are struggling for the bare necessities and general business was seriously affected. If, then, some means could be evolved which would combine the benefits of sufficient capital with a disinterested effort to further the solution of the problem of economically handling many of the ores it is obvious that the general good to be derived would be beyond estimating. Mining would in time be restored to its legitimate place as a sound business, offering employment to thousands of men, confidence would be restored to a vast business area and the general economy materially raised.

In the early days of mining with fortunes made and spent in a few months, methods were of little consequence from the standpoint of either conservation or economy. There was no reason for even the imperfect methods. Everyone had money, business was brisk, investment money plentiful and easy and everybody happy in the belief of business security and an optimistic future. But gradually it dawned on them all that something was wrong. Like an insidious disease, conditions were fixed before the realization came. Here and there a mine shut down then a mill, a heretofore rich district was gradually abandoned, prosperous towns began to show empty houses, business fell off. The bubble in the supply centers began to raise the situation money grew tighter and conditions soon became apparent to the entire business community. Something had happened to the mining industry.

But not until profits had been spent and carried to its limit in a vain endeavor to recoup the losses first evident to the operator did it become a certainty to the general business community that there was a change in conditions. In general it can be said that everyone was caught unprepared though immediate steps were taken to meet the situation. This however took time and much money and the industry marked time if it did not to some extent go backward. In due course melting relieved the situation to some extent allowing many mines to work again at a satisfactory profit, but at this time we are again confronted with the need of further economies. Concentration with all its advantages must be supplemented by methods that will reduce the losses yet desired condition of more general mining. Individual or company effort cannot be expected to do more than will directly meet their own case as has been shown. The greatest need is where the means at hand are the best. The general solution is not far enough along as yet to attract capital to the erection of new plants following a policy of any particular district.

And so we are back to the same point as in the beginning. A testing plant maintained by the government and working in conjunction with the operators and others interested in these investigations, with all records available to the mining public under very simple restrictions, with the opportunities for comparing results of different operations on the ores of different districts could and would add many times its cost of operation to the

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE CLEARING HOUSE BANKS

NEW YORK, July 6.—The Financial will say:

While a reduction in excess cash reserve has been anticipated, the statement of the clearing house banks in New York for the week ending July 6, showing an actual deficit of $5,413,200 in this item, was a surprising feature. The deficit exists only in the statement calculated on actual conditions, the statement based on daily averages showing an excess above the 25 per cent minimum of $1,828,500.

The explanation of the loss of reserve is to be found in the decrease of $3,151,000 in cash during the week. Loans expanded $11,817,000, and it is evident that these loans represented an actual cash reduction to the banks. On the week's operations the banks lost probably something like $10,000, owing to continued exports of gold and dealings with the treasury, and the loan expansion accounts for the remainder of cash loss. Deposits, as might have been expected, decreased heavily, the actual reduction having been $25,850,000, while the reserve requirement considerably, it could not make up for the heavy cash loss, hence the deficit reported.

GOLD HILL BONANZA REVIVED

From Mining Science.

The famed groups of mines on the north slope of Gold Hill Boulder county, Colorado, namely, Slide group, Corn tunnel group and Prussian group of mines, is once more the scene of active operations. These properties have produced over $3,000,000 in their history and have over three miles of workings.

In one period of 26 months the Slide mine shipped 250,000 worth of ore to the smelter averaging $183 per ton, while the Prussian property inside of one period of three years produced $300,000 at an expense of $55,000. Among the three veins of this consolidation are the Prussian, Tans, Klonkha, Slide, Bestle, Paogak and Bonanza. These veins carry a sulpho-telluride and non sulphide ore varying from 20 in. to 32 in. in width that samples from 38 to 48 per ton. The development upon the Slide vein has reached a depth of 1,050 feet and the telluride still carries in a large strong vein. This vein can produce from its present development 30 to 75 tons of $12 ore for a series of years. The Prussian and Tans veins from a large strong junction opened by the main tunnel from the left-hand canon. Here the ore body is from 5 to 10 feet wide and $10 to $14 in value per ton. Carload shipments from the Klonkha, unsorted, average $11 per ton, while the Prussian vein itself seldom runs below $10 as it is broken down.

Work underground is being carried through the No. 1 tunnel on the Prussian, now in 1,600 feet from the portal. There have been serious caves from the old mines, these are being caught up and the old tunnel will be pushed to a point over the tenth level, thus saving the cost of the ore from the entire property through No. 1 tunnel.

The mill at the portal of this tunnel is being changed into an electric-driven, 75-ton daily capacity concentrator. Here lies the key to the regeneration of these old mine producers. For the past 20 years efforts have been made to handle these splendid bodies of $10 to $18 ores, of which the entire property can produce 500 tons daily. Many thousands have been spent in processes, only to score failure. The present management is confining itself to a straight concentration system, proved and tested. The mill machinery are being installed and the mill will be operating by the end of April. Little or no dependence is being placed upon the high-grade ore of the Slide vein. This ore is produced and cared for but in the large tonnage of $10 to $14 mineral is based the success of this enterprise. One feature of the mill will be in an unusually extensive system of settling tanks and thousands of gallons tankage and settling boxes. All the tailings will be stored for future handling by whatever process may be found practical. The management believes that a tailing pile with $10 per ton value will be a source of profit in the days to come.

The Gold Bullion Milling Co. of Colorado, 500,000 shares of $1 par value, Joseph Bottles, president, Henry R. Thompson, vice president, W. A. Eldridge, secretary-treasurer, E. G. Hyatt, manager, John R. Wood, general superintendent, are operating the properties under lease and options. The people putting up the money are on the ground taking a hand in the work, seeing where every dollar goes, systematizing the operations along business lines, not by long-distance calls but at first hand, J. C. McDowell of the Denver Quartz Mill & Crusher Co. is superintending the changes in the mill.

NEW COMPANY FORMED.

Articles of incorporation for the Kelly Exploration company have been filed for record with the county clerk, by the incorporators and directors, W. S. Copeland, Michael Kelly and S. Judson Cox. The new company, capitalized for $25,000 divided into 25,000 shares of the par value of $1 each, will maintain offices in Victor and will operate in this district.

PROSPECTING THE PLACER GROUND.

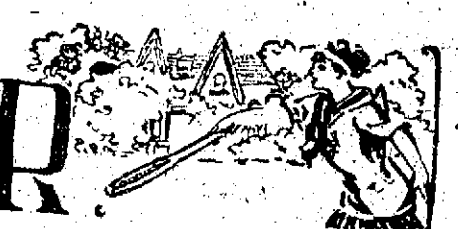

Miners reported working in the interest of a syndicate, are at work prospecting the placer grounds on Mineral hill, northwest of and immediately adjacent to this city. An option to purchase is reported given. The placer ground on Mineral hill lies on patented ledge mining claims, and it is possible that more other than surface mining rights—down to bed rock—have been given the prospectors. Mineral hill has produced placer gold to the value of probably $50,000.

WORK AND PLAY FOR THE IDLE HOUR

MISS NORRIS'

ANSWERS TO

CORRESPONDENTS

MRS. M. M. G. A. is a brand of rather coarse weave, such as are used for bathroom linens, forms a neat, good finish for a baby's flannel gown.

Turn up the edges of the flannel, and over it sew the brand with a loose buttonhole stitch on either side. If the buttonholing is done with care, it will add to the appearance of the flannel coat.

French knots of the blue dots, as embroidered dots made at regular intervals through the center of the brand will make this brand still more attractive.

Plain Scarf.

E. W.—Linen of a rather heavy quality would be the best material to use for the French and cycle work. While French embroidery may be worked on almost any material, cycle work can only be successfully done on a goods of smooth firm weave, preferably linen.

A cream linen embroidered in white will produce a softer and richer effect, and think you will find it more pleasing for a piano scarf than one in all white. The scarf should either be made perfectly straight, merely covering the top and hanging down on each side, or if you wish the embroidery to hang over the top of the piano, make it according to diagram No. 2, which you enclosed, straight across the front and out at the edges so that it will hang perfectly straight.

An embroidered scarf draped in the center would detract very much from the beauty of the work. Embroidered work should always be made up along simple straight lines in order that its advantages may be seen and appreciated.

To Trim Parasol.

P. L. O.—A plain piece of silk parasol may be given a very nice look by applying a silk fringe to the edge. The fringe may either be the same shade as the parasol or in a lighter or darker tone.

Anyone with even a slight knowledge of machine could easily and quickly make a knotted fringe that would be very lovely and an expensive parasol could thus be had with very little expenditure.

The very simple knots should be used for a fringe of this kind, and the result will be much more pleasing than if an intricate pattern was carried out.

Plain Picot.

L. D.—The picot, which is ordinarily used in high crochet, is called plain picot. It is made by passing a string of chain stitches, brought together by a plain stitch.

The number of stitches used depends upon the size the picot is to be. For a small picot, make a chain of five, count four stitches for the loop or picot, close with a single stitch to the fifth chain, and there make five chains. This constitutes a plain picot and bar.

All letters must be sent in care of the paper, and each will be answered in turn. For personal replies, enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Practical Gift.

Mina S.—A gift which is unusual and sure to please the girl who expects to take a summer vacation, consists of a cigarette case having two pockets. The one is a large deep pocket, and the other pocket is in the flap which buttons over the large pocket.

A small folding ironing board is concealed in the flap and the flap pocket contains the holder.

Creation of a strong durable quality should be chosen for this case, which is bound with tape.

This gift would also prove very useful to the college girl, as well as the woman whose work necessitates her being away from home.

Sweet Pea Design for Lingerie Blouse

For a lingerie blouse the sweet pea design will prove most effective.

Although a collar might be used with this waist, it would be equally pretty with either a square or round neck.

This pattern may be carried out in Kensington embroidery, with the stems and tendrils in French stemming.

All white would be very pretty, but a touch of color could be added with splendid effect. White with a pinkish-lavender for the under petals and the turn-back portion of the large flower would be lovely. All white with the dots and tendrils in some delicate color would be a lovely combination.

This design could also be outlined, the petals of the flowers being filled with seedings; in fact the embroidery may be carried out in any conventional way, but if colors are used the dainty, delicate look suggestive of the sweet pea, should be kept in mind.

Possibilities of Tatted Border

THE wheel design which fashions border for the linen bolster sham, bureau scarf and attractive dollies is made in the following manner: The wheels are made separately with one thread. Begin at the middle by making a ring of 12 s. 12 p., each separated by 2 d. s.; then 1 d. s., then draw up. Leave an eighth inch of thread and work a smaller ring as follows: 2 d. s., join to a p. of middle ring; 3 d. s., draw up; and turn the work and after a fifth of an inch interval work a ring of 5 d. s., 1 p., then five times alternately 2 d. s., 1 p., then 2 d. s., 1 p., 5 d. s.; draw up and turn the work and after a fifth of an inch interval repeat from the center, but in working the larger ring join to the last p. of the preceding larger ring instead of forming the 1st p. To make the border each wheel is tatted to the previous wheel as formed. When the design is completed it is sewed to the linen covers on the right side, then the linen is cut from beneath the tatted and hemmed. In the dollies the tatted edge is made just to fit into the scallops.

Once having learned to make this wheel pattern the needlewoman will find it can be used in a variety of decorative ways. In addition to the bolster sham, bureau and chignon scarf she may fancy the suggestion of a handsome bedspread bordered with the wheels and with panel inserts joined with strips of linen.

SUITS FOR SUMMER

Neckwear Featured

His latest summer suit worn is:

Suit jackets show a gradual, rather than a radical, increase in length, finger tip length, approximately thirty-two inches, predominating. The length based on the varying heights of women.

The lines of the suits are slightly more shaped, following the silhouette of the figure. Novelty features to consist of shirred and belted effects.

Skirts to confine on straight lines, slightly more width being secured by the introduction of straight hanging plaits. The slightly raised waist line with inside belting to continue in favor.

Separate coats to be full length and cut on straight lines.

Some materials to be made in perfectly loose shapes, with or without belts; others to be made in more sharply effects. Features of separate coats to consist of set-in sleeves, deep armholes, sloping shoulders, and high buttoning effects.

Crashes, striped linens, and novelty weaves are being used to make up some of the new models, and these are effective. Cotton agaric cloth, both in white and in colors, is seen in many of the houses and is being used for entire suits, as well as for trimming purposes.

The most popular modes are the modified cutaway coat, about twenty-six inches in length, many having the back cut in two sections and joined slightly above the waist line. Half belts or entire belts are seen also and Norfolk are meeting with excellent success in the smaller sizes.

There is a limited demand for suits made of a combination of materials. Among these are a white and blue striped linen skirt with a blue linen coat, with collar and revers the same as the skirt, and a Norfolk or khaki colored linen with a plain white skirt and collar of white.

The skirts in the suits for late summer are made two and two and one-half yards in width, many showing the introduction of plaits.

The fashion of wearing a coat different in color and material from the skirt has been eagerly adopted by all classes of women. Even if it lacks in style, which it does not, the economy of it would appeal. Undoubtedly by midsummer they will have reached a great vogue, when, with a background of sand and sea or of woods and fields, they will be even more attractive than in town. The separate red coats are cut straight and loose, with only one seam under each arm, with a man's collar and easy coat sleeves, and scanty little side pockets with stitched laps.

All sizes and figures are suited in the fashionable separate black coat of silk, satin, crepe de chine, or heavy black chiffon, self-lined. These coats are worn with white gowns. Sometimes they are lined with some soft white stuff which turns over into a deep collar and wide cuffs with the edges left untrimmed. This is the prettiest finish imaginable, with a white gown, and one which lends itself to endless possibilities of color adornment in the small accessories. A number of short, fancy wraps of charmeuse and taffeta, too, are worn over summer gowns. Some of these are short, particularly the light colored taffetas, being from twenty to twenty-six inches in length and are made with elbow sleeves; others are sleeveless. The shorter charmeuse wraps are usually thirty-six to forty-five inches long and some are lined with light colored satin, chiffon, and novelty silks.

The plain serge or mixed cloth tailor gown is nowadays obligatory. It is worn shopping and walking in the morning, and it must be strictly of the kind English and American women wear, with no "fantaisies" — just a plain cut skirt and a plain coat with men's sleeves and a roll collar.

It is true the skirt is finished up in a curve over the ankles, either in front or at the left side. This slash in reality allows freedom in movement, while at the same time the line of the skirt retains its straight tightness.

The fashionable woman must also have one of the new tailor gowns in gray or gray mauve whispered with deep, fat plaits at the back and front. Or she must have one of those which are so marvelously well cut that it fits closely and perfectly to the figure, with only one seam in the skirt, and that either in front or at the back where it is lapped over to form a panel trimmed with large crystal buttons. The coats of these suits are shorter over the hips than the others and have large open lingerie collars and plisse trills at the waists of the sleeves, which are opened on the outer seam and fastened with crystal buttons to match the skirt.

The short taffeta frocks are quaint. They are ruffled and frilled and cut and slashed in all manner of ways. When light in the skirt and trimmed with three frills scalloped or stamped out to represent leaves, a similar border to the coat, and worn with shoes and stockings of the two colors they are striking and original.

When in addition the neck is bare and the Directoire collar, high only at the back, is of the same shade as the trimming on the man's shape hat, the effect is still more startling, especially when this trimming is a stiff upright brush of feathers set on the edge of the brim. The coats slope away toward the back, but not nearly as much as at the beginning of the season.

There is no doubt that the shops have been clever in offering and advising such tropical fabrics as Shantung, rayon, pineapple cloth, and Chinese silk. Women who dislike the usual grade of pongee, with excellent reasons, do not know about the admirable advantage of Shantung and rayon over all other suitings for summer.

There are heavy grades of pongee with a strong khaki tint, to silk, made on the best looms of China. The silkiness of the surface sheds dust and is exceptionally cool to the body. It soils less easily than linen, is cooler if anything, and does not wrinkle. A coat and skirt of Shantung will last for weeks without needing cleaning if one is at all careful, and if it has merely spots on it these can be taken off at home without sending the suit to the cleaner.

These suits are the expensive. The price varies, according to the shop or the tailor, but I have seen excellent ones selling for under $25. Rayon sells for a bit less, but the fabric is more expensive, and it is possible that it is narrower.

The best of these suits are made with entire simplicity. There is no addition of braid or any undue amount of buttons. The skirts are made in four gores, are quite narrow, have a hand turned plait down the middle of the back, which may be stitched down if one prefers, and the fastenings are directly in front.

The coat has a wide back, which is slightly full at the waist line, as nearly all the smart coats are, and has a belt running straight across, fastened at the two side seams with pearl buttons and long padded buttonholes. The fronts are open to the waist line and finished with a wide collar that shapes down to a point at the first button.

The same silhouette is carried out in these coats that prevailed through the winter. The body from the shoulders to the waist must be large and the hips small. Fullness is not desired, for the large bust and fat shoulders are as entirely out of fashion as they have been for half a dozen years. It is breadth that is required in order that the size of the hips may be small in comparison.

This breadth is not obtained by padding, for all evidences of crinolines or cotton are in utterly bad taste. It is obtained by cleverness of cut and by a lack of attempt to fit the body. Clothes must appear to be loose from the neck to the waist line and then snugly wrap the body in the ankles.

These coats of Shantung and rayon follow this idea, and they do it more easily than serge and rayon, because the material is softer and more pliable. The large collars and revers in one, which they all have, are immense aids to this effect of breadth, and they play a charming part in the color scheme when one so desires.

There are usually pockets in these coats, nice square envelope affairs with one or two pearl buttons as trimming, and the sleeves are long and shapely, like those in a man's coat, and are finished with a two inch turnover cuff and three white pearl buttons. If the tailor wants to put a lining in such a coat don't allow him to do it, for its mission of coolness is at once nullified.

These suits are satisfactory for morning and street wear, with a plain hat and a white wash blouse, or, what is better, a polo shirtwaist of white china silk, which is quite the garment of the season for women. Yet one can turn either a rayon or a shantung suit into something suitable for afternoon wear by having a deep collar of flit or macramé lace or one of bright red or blue, then adding an elaborate blouse of this charming figured net, which is as soft as velvet.

It is not necessary to add that the choice of one's hat, and shoes, changes the character of a costume more quickly than anything else, and therefore one does not crash. Whether or not the majority of women take it up, it remains a most satisfactory material. One should get the light weight, as the kind that has too rough a surface is apt to catch all kinds of dust and soil.

Separate skirts of it are better than linen or duck. Those who have been wearing them in the south during the midseason give glowing praise of the material. It withstands dirt far better than linen. It does not wrinkle, it launders well because it does not need starch or ironing. Skirts of it look snappy for morning wear with the polo skirts of white china silk, when they are belted, untrimmed, and fastened down the front with large white pearl buttons.

Coat suits of crash are delightfully cool. The coats are made on the prevailing models, with a belt at the back and a low double breasted fastening at the waist front. The sleeves are long and small or three-quarter and wide, as one prefers. The latter has undoubtedly advantages over the former for warm weather, although it is usually not so graceful or becoming.

The collars of these crash coats should be in color. The all white in this rough fabric is not as effective as when it is cut short with plain colored linen or cloth. Pompeian red, turquoise blue, and hunting pink are the colors chiefly used.

Those who do not care for the warmth or weight of three garments to a suit are content with one piece frock of crash which they make up as they did linen frocks and find them of excellent service. The blouse is fashioned on that prevailing model which was introduced last summer, and no adherents, and had found its own this spring. It has long shoulder lines, which means that the armholes are not in their normal place, has long sleeves usually gathered to the armhole and finished at the wrist or below the elbow, and the fastening down the middle front beginning low on the bust at the end of a wide collar of colored linen.

A new pattern woven with a cord effect and known as Hattienne is another good choice for the trotting frock, and the black frock when becoming is, it skillfully made, rather the most knowing looking thing of its kind. The dark blues are good, too, and there are attractive things in brown, gray and green, and even in white, which are generally wearable as the black and blues.

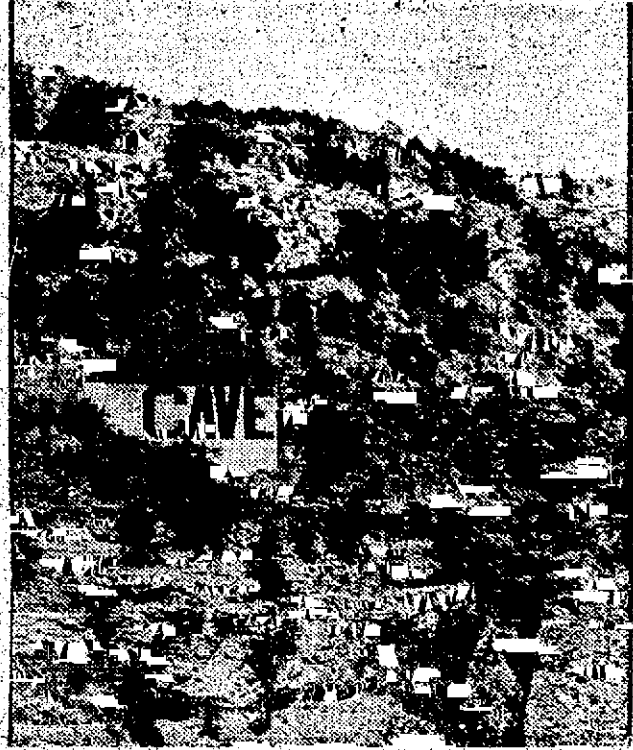

The French appear to be yellow mad this season, and all shades of the color from ochre to orange are popular, but the butter, canary, and greenish yellow on the sulphur tone are perhaps the yellows most in evidence. The last of the three, though trying, is a prodigious favorite, and in soft, lustrous chiffon taffeta relieved by touches of black and a collar and sleeve trills or cuffs of fine lingerie, net, or lace is a trotting frock motif often repeated by the Paris makers.

Yellowish tones, butter yellow and even deeper, are taking the place of white in many of the French sheer blouses of net, marquisette, batiste, etc., and similar tones are liked in collars, trills, and jabots. Charming net frocks are shown, too, in the distinctly yellow tones. Some delightful little tub frocks in sheer white cotton crepe are effectively trimmed in plain bands, collar and cuffs of soft butter yellow crepon or cotton eponge, and the French designers even use to trim sheer white, vivid orange tones in eponge or the rough agaric.

Won, doubtless, by the youthfulness of its outlines, every one falls under the spell of the new short, loose coats. Whether in vivid red, rich French blue, white, or a color to match the skirt, these little coats are extremely smart and useful. The dresses over which they are worn are of cotton crepe trimmed with flounces. The fullness of the flounces is laid in tucks. The cut of the coat is the last word in a separate garment for those who still claim youth.

Van Briggie Pottery is especially noted for an individuality of mat glaze which was discovered by Mr. Artus Van Briggie in 1898 and was immediately recognized by the master heads in ceramics. Tourists and visitors to the Pikes Peak region are invited to visit the Van Briggie Pottery, where they may learn how the crude, rough clay taken from the ground is moulded and colored into the uniquely artistic forms which characterize this product of the Centennial state.
